The 180 George Calisto, Kate Calisto, 2021-06-06 The 180 tells the fictional story of a three-hour meeting, where eight college administrators and two researchers are now most likely looking back on this meeting with ambivalence, wondering if it was its shifting dynamics, incendiary arguments, or its underlying deceptiveness that drove them to cross the Rubicon or merely dip their toe to test its temperature. In the span of 180 minutes, all participants were taken to a plane where psychology went head-to-head with personal philosophies. Some of these attendees admitted to being escorted into the discomfiting Piagetian realm of accommodation, where they were compelled to consider surrendering a lifelong belief. Watercooler conversations have also supported the rumor that a few of those who attended this meeting had converted to the religion of an accidental life, claiming that the meeting had been the best three-hour meeting they ever had! Rarely do meetings spawn cerebrations that lead to cognitive paradigm shifts that register high on the Richter scale. On a Tuesday morning in October, such a meeting took place. It did not follow its originally planned agenda; its real agenda was not revealed until days after the meeting; and its merits may, to this day, not be recognized by all who attended. However, the seed it planted forever provoked the question: How much of a role does luck play in our lives?The 180 describes this 180-minute meeting in detail, never failing to interject the stuff of psychology and its huge role in our lives. In the end, The 180 conveys one clear message: the term meritocracy should've never even entered the realms of our thinking.

Moon Man Bart Sibrel,2021-09-11 Moon Man is Bart Sibrel's revealing memoir recalling his harrowing journey investigating what really happened during America's famous Apollo missions. It features truly hair-raising and life-threatening encounters with agents from the US government's secret agencies. Sibrel's memoir divulges, for the very first time, his real-life espionage adventures while uncovering one of the CIA's greatest secrets, including Sibrel's discovery of privately recorded audio of an Apollo astronaut plotting his assassination by the CIA, which would not be necessary if the Apollo missions were real. Moon Man also exposes, for the very first time, the official CIA Code-Name for the real Apollo project, the military base where the first fake Moon landing was filmed, as well as the names of fifteen US government scientists and officials who were recorded in attendance for the first Moon landing falsification, some of whom are still alive today. This highly revealing information was provided to Sibrel by the Chief of Security of this secretive military base, who finally confessed his regrettable participation in this despicable government fraud on his deathbed. Bart Sibrel is an award-winning filmmaker, writer, and investigative journalist, who has produced television programs and documentaries for over thirty-five years. He has been employed by two of the three major US networks, worked as a television news reporter, and has produced segments for ABC, NBC, and CBS. Sibrel regularly speaks as a guest commentator regarding the Moon landing fraud, and has appeared as such on NBC, FOX, CNN, and HBO to discuss his films A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Moon and Astronauts Gone Wild. Bart Sibrel grew up as a devout supporter of the supposed Moon landings, yet over the years, gradually began to recognize their unfortunate falsification. In Sibrel's mind, the claim that astronauts walked on the moon on the very first attempt with antiquated untried 1960s technology, when today with five decades of more advanced technology the US can only send astronauts one-thousandth the distance to the Moon, simply defies logic. Sibrel is convinced that until the Moon landing fraud is exposed, the governments of the world will continue deceiving the people under their care until their eventual demise.
