Leonard Wood and Cuban Independence, 1898–1902 James H. Hitchman, 2012-12-06 This is a study of the Military Government of Cuba from 1898 to 1902. Tracing and explaining the actions of General Leonard Wood's administration during those years reveals how the United States Government resolved the questions of independence, strategic security, and economic interests in regard to Cuba. Leonard Wood, Secretary of War Elihu Root, Senator Orville H. Platt, and President William McKinley formulated and carried out policies that had a strong influence on subsequent Cuban-American relations. The broader aspects of this study, civil-military relations and American imperialism, are topics of importance to all citizens today. This is institutional and biographical history, written in the belief that a full account of the men, action, and circumstances will add to our understanding of the period when the United States emerged as a world power. I am indebted to Professors Gerald E. Wheeler of San Jose State College and Armin Rappaport of the University of California, San Diego, who directed my research in the early stages, and to Professor Eric Bellquist of the University of California, Berkeley, for his criticism of the manuscript when it was in dissertation stage. To Professor Raymond J. Sontag I would like to pay special tribute for his guidance and inspiration through the years. The assistance of my mother, Mrs. Sue Hitchman, is deeply appreciated. My thanks go also to the staffs at the Library of the U. S.

Chinese Labour in South Africa, 1902-10 R. Bright, 2013-11-01 This book explores the decision of the British Empire to import Chinese labour to southern Africa despite the already tense racial situation in the region. It enables a clearer understanding of racial and political developments in southern Africa during the reconstruction period and places localised issues within a wider historiography.

Militarism and the British Left, 1902-1914 M. Johnson, 2013-01-11 Militarism has traditionally been regarded as a phenomenon of the political right. As this book demonstrates, however, various groups on the political left in Britain during the years before the Great War were able to accommodate, and even assimilate, militaristic ideas, sentiments, and policies to a remarkable degree.

Civil Antisemitism, Modernism, and British Culture, 1902–1939 Lara Trubowitz, 2012-04-26 This book addresses the development of 'civil' anti-Semitism in twentieth-century Britain, a crucial and often critically neglected strand of anti-Jewish rhetoric that, prior to 1934, was essential to the legitimization of proto-fascist political and literary discourses, as well as stylistic practices within literary modernism.

Dimmick, Second Cavalry, is designated to command the escort, and will confer for further particulars with General H. V. Boynton. Very respectfully, Geo. Andrews, Assistant Adjutant-General. Washington, May 20, 1902. My Dear Major: What would official pageants in Washington be but for you? I never have anything to do with one that I do not at once find myself under the deepest obligations to you, to your assistants and your men. Let me thank you most earnestly for your attention on Saturday at the re-burial of General Rosecrans. The work of your force was perfect in giving the great column free space for movement, and everybody interested appreciated it very highly-- but no one more than, Your friend, H. V. Boynton. Major Richard Sylvester, Chief of Metropolitan Police. May 22, 1902. My Dear Colonel: Will you please accept for the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, and for myself personally, this expression of the gratitude we feel for the attention which you gave to the preparations connected with the ceremonies of Saturday last. It was a matter of common remark on all sides that no great occasion has passed off in Washington with greater smoothness and success than that which you were so largely instrumental in organizing. Cordially yours, H. V. Boynton, Corresponding Secretary, Colonel George Andrews, IT. S. A., War Department, Washington, D. C. PROGRAMME OF EXERCISES. The Society of the Army of the Cumberland.
