Using Emerging Technologies to Develop Professional Learning Jean Murray,Warren Kidd,2017-10-02 Internationally, there is a growing body of research about learners' responses to, and uses of, emerging technologies. However, the adoption of these technologies in teachers' professional development is still largely under-researched. Much of the existing literature still positions teachers as playing 'catch-up' in terms of using technology for teaching and learning in an ever expanding and changing world, and ignores the roles that these emerging technologies can play in teacher, and teacher educator, development and learning. This book aims to address the lack of research in the area, and it contributes to the new knowledge area of how emerging technologies can effectively address professional learning, drawing on case studies and perspectives from across the world. Contributors use a wide variety of approaches to analyse the potential for emerging (and established) technologies, including digital, Web2.0, social media, and IT tools, to develop 'effective' or 'deep' professional learning for pre- and in-service teachers and teacher educators. This book was originally published as a special issue of Professional Development in Education.

Big Money With Your Book ...Without Selling A Single Copy! Trevor Crane, 2017-10-24 Let's begin this with total transparency. Most people don't make a lot of money with their book. The average self-published author makes less than $100 per year. The average U.S. nonfiction book is now selling less than 250 copies per year and less than 2,000 copies over its lifetime. Very few titles are big sellers. Only 62 of 1,000 business books released in 2009 sold more than 5,000 copies, according to an analysis by the Codex Group (New York Times, March 31, 2010). A book has far less than a 1% chance of being stocked in an average bookstore. There are thousands of titles competing for that limited shelf space. What if your book becomes a bestseller? Most people think, that once that happens, your book will take off. Then you'll be in-demand for interviews, and everyone will just magically just come buy your stuff, and you'll be famous... right? Wrong. "If you build it, they will come." Only worked for Kevin Costner in the Field Of Dreams. (And "Shoeless Joe Jackson" is probably not your target audience.) The TRUTH is: You need to have a system in place (i.e. products and services, or a business) to monetize your book. What happens if you don't? Well... not much. And that's the problem.
