Xina M. Uhl, Melanie Ann Apel

Virginia Apgar Melanie Apel,2003-12-15 Profiles a woman anesthesiologist who was a pioneer in medicine, graduating from medical school at a time when few women attended college and going on to develop the Apgar score for measuring a newborn's physical condition at birth.

Virginia Apgar Xina M. Uhl,Melanie Ann Apel,2019-12-15 Prior to the development of a simple test called the Apgar score, many newborn babies missed receiving the urgent care they needed at birth. Dr. Virginia Apgar came up with the Apgar score to help these newborns by rating them in a number of different health areas. The savior of countless young lives, Virginia Apgar is hailed as a legend, a trailblazer, and an inventor. Readers delve into the riveting story of a medical legend who inspired women doctors to succeed at a time when society did not value the contributions of women in the work force.

Virginia Wouldn't Slow Down!: The Unstoppable Dr. Apgar and Her Life-Saving Invention Carrie A. Pearson,2023-08-07 A delightful and distinctive picture book about Dr. Virginia Apgar, who invented the eponymous test for evaluating newborn health that's used worldwide every day. The Apgar Score is known the world over: a test given to babies to determine their health moments after they are born. Less well-known is the story of the brilliant, pioneering woman who invented it. Born at the turn of the twentieth century, Virginia "Ginny" Apgar soared above what girls were expected to do—or not do. She wasn't quiet, she wore all sorts of outfits, she played the sports she wanted to—and she pursued the career she chose, graduating near the top of her class at Columbia University and becoming only the second board-certified female anesthesiologist in the United States. The simple five-step test she created—scribbled on the back of a piece of paper in answer to a trainee's question—became the standard and continues to impact countless newborn babies' lives today. Ginny adored science, hated cooking, drove fast, made her own violins, earned a pilot's license, and traveled the world. Here, Carrie Pearson's jaunty storytelling and Nancy Carpenter's playful illustrations capture the energy and independence of a woman who didn't slow down for anything—and changed newborn care forever.

Abstract: Abstract of thesis entitled Evaluation of Apgar score as an intermediate assessment of the risk of early mortality Submitted by CHONG Siu Yung for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Hong Kong in October 2004 The Apgar scoring system invented in 1952 is a practical method of evaluating the general physical condition of a newborn infant shortly after delivery. It is crucial to understand the underlying properties behind the use of the scoring system. The aim of this study is to clarify the prognostic value of the Apgar scoring system as an intermediate assessment of risk of early mortality, utilizing one of the largest and most established national birth registries, i.e. the Swedish Medical Birth Registry. It is commonly accepted that the 5-minute Apgar score is the most accurate and widely accepted predictor of neonatal morbidity and mortality, compared with its 1 minute counterpart. However, in this thesis, it was found that the 1-minute Apgar score was a significant independent factor for the prediction of early mortality. The prevalence of low 5-minute Apgar score was insignificant between infants suffered from sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) and live birth controls, while non-SIDS postneonatal deaths were found to be significantly more related to low 5- minute Apgar score. In addition, maternal smoking during pregnancy was found to be an important modifiable risk factor for SEDS, especially during the years 1993-1998, following the recommendation of supine sleeping position. The conventional Apgar scoring grouping, i.e. 0-3, 4-6, 7-10, was not supported as it is not the optimal grouping for classifying newborns at risk. Based on the receiver operating characteristic (ROC) analysis, a score

The Disabled Child Amanda Apgar, 2023-01-10 When children are born with disabilities or become disabled in childhood, parents often experience bewilderment: they find themselves unexpectedly in another world, without a roadmap, without community, and without narratives to make sense of their experiences. The Disabled Child: Memoirs of a Normal Future tracks the narratives that have emerged from the community of parent-memoirists who, since the 1980s, have written in resistance of their children's exclusion from culture. Though the disabilities represented in the genre are diverse, the memoirs share a number of remarkable similarities; they are generally written by white, heterosexual, middle or upper-middle class, able-bodied parents, and they depict narratives in which the disabled child overcomes barriers to a normal childhood and adulthood. Apgar demonstrates that in the process of telling these stories, which recuperate their children as productive members of society, parental memoirists write their children into dominant cultural narratives about gender, race, and class. By reinforcing and buying into these norms, Apgar argues, "special needs" parental memoirs reinforce ableism at the same time that they're writing against it.
