Tips to increase your credit score Miyake Eze, 2022-03-09 There are many misconceptions about credit scores out there. There are customers who believe that they don't have a credit score and many customers who think that their credit scores just don't really matter. These sorts of misconceptions can hurt your chances at some jobs, at good interest rates, and even your chances of getting some apartments. The truth is, if you have a bank account and bills, then you have a credit score, and your credit score matters more than you might think. Your credit score may be called many things, including a credit risk rating, a FICO score, a credit rating, a FICO rating, or a credit risk score. All these terms refer to the same thing: the three-digit number that lets lenders get an idea of how likely you are to repay your bills. Every time you apply for credit, apply for a job that requires you to handle money, or even apply for some more exclusive types of apartment living, your credit score is checked. In fact, your credit score can be checked by anyone with a legitimate business need to do so. Apartment managers can use your credit score to decide whether you can be trusted to pay your rent on time. Employers can use your credit score to decide whether you can be trusted in a high-responsibility job that requires you to handle money. The problem with credit scores is that there is quite a bit of misinformation circulated about, especially through some less than scrupulous companies who claim they can help you with your credit report and credit score - for a cost, of course. Credit Score Secrets Steve J Carter, 2020-04-30 Do you want to learn how to repair and boost your credit score.? If yes, then keep reading... A low credit score can be detrimental to your life in more ways than you can imagine. It involves much more than stopping you from buying that awesome new outfit in the store window. It can also prevent you from having something as basic a need as a bank account or prevent you from finding a means to support yourself. Regardless of the reason, you might be suffering from poor credit, the natural instinct, when it happens, is that your life almost immediately comes to a halt. You may feel as if you are stuck in the quicksand of negative situations, and it may seem impossible for you to extricate yourself. - Without good credit, you can't get that good job you need to earn enough money to pay your bills. - Without a good credit score, you can't find a decent place to live, you can't find a car to get you back and forth to work even if you do, and you can't open a bank account where you can manage your money or put some aside if you need to. Instead, you are forced to go to the highly expensive check cashing services, resort to ulterior means of getting the funds you need, or you're losing precious time away from family and friends just so you can get by and do what you need to do. This book covers the following topics: What is credit What is fico score How to get your free credit report Understanding credit report The right way to read your credit report Simple ways to fix/repair your credit score Section 609 Templates Considerations and options for debt consolidations How to boost your credit score of 100 points How to get credit card and its pros and cons Right mindset for credit management Credit bureau More ways to boost credit score ...And much more Credit is not just a matter of convenience, it is a way of life, and the more you struggle without it, the more you realize what you have lost. The sad part is losing your credit means you've lost your good reputation in the community. People look at you differently, they respect you less, and they pull away when they know you don't have it. It is very easy to lose your credit reputation, and yet many people have; in fact, millions have. And what's worse, few people are willing to help a person with a low credit score to restore it. It is as if they feel that being associated with someone who is financially irresponsible may somehow rub off on them and taint their own reputation. Many feel doomed to spend the rest of their lives, struggling to survive against all odds. It feels like everyone is against you no matter what you do. They are not interested in the person but are more focused on those numbers that claim to say all they can about you. This leads you to self-punishment, a sense of self-loathing in some cases, and feeling like you just don't want to try anymore. ▶▶▶ Scroll up, click on Buy Now and start learning! ▶▶▶
