Color Analyzers Cary Sneider,Cheryll Hawthorne,Alan Gould,2001 Teasing a rainbow from a lightbulb &decoding messages from abstract art &unveiling the answer to why an apple looks red. &Through these activities and others in this unit, students are immediately and physically involved in investigations of light, color, and the wonders of how our eyes work.Experimenting with color filters, students decipher secret messages--and create their own--as they learn how certain colors are better reflected from some items than others. They use diffraction gratings to appreciate how many hidden colors a source gives off, even though our naked eye perceives only one.Previous editions of Color Analyzers were priced at $31.50 and came with a set of diffraction gratings and color filters. This new edition does not contain the gratings and filters, but does have instructions on how to obtain them inexpensively.Cary Sneider is currently Vice President for Program at the Boston Museum of Science.Also available by Cary Sneider Oobleck: What Do Scientists Do? Illumination and Color in Computer Generated Imagery Roy Hall,2012-12-06 In a very broad sense the historical development of computer graphics can be considered in three phases, each a giant step down the road towards realistic computer generated images. The first, during the late 1960's and early 1970's, can perhaps be characterized as the wire frame era. Basically pictures were composed of lines. Considerable emphasis was placed on real time interactive manipulation of the model. As models became more complex and as raster technology developed, eliminating the hidden lines or hidden surfaces from the image became critical for visual understanding. This requirement resulted in the second phase of computer graphics, the hidden surface era, that developed during the 1970's and early 1980's. The names associated with hidden surface algorithms read like a who's who of computer graphics. The culmination of the hidden surface era and the beginning of the current and third era in computer graphics, the rendering era, was Turner Whitted's incorporation of a global illumination model into the ray tracing algorithm. Now the goal was not just to generate an image, but to generate a realistic appearing image.
