Structural Change in Labor Supply and Cross-Country Differences in Hours Worked

Alexander Bick, 2021 This paper studies how structural change in labor supply along the development spectrum shapes cross-country differences in hours worked. We emphasize two main forces: sectoral reallocation from self-employment to wage work, and declining fixed costs of wage work. We show that these forces are crucial for understanding how the extensive margin (the employment rate) and intensive margin (hours per worker) of aggregate hours worked vary with income per capita. To do so we build and estimate a quantitative model of labor supply featuring a traditional self-employment sector and a modern wage-employment sector. When estimated to match cross-country data, the model predicts that sectoral reallocation explains more than half of the total hours decrease at lower levels of development. Declining fixed costs drive the rise in employment rates at higher levels of income per capita, and imply higher hours in the future, in contrast to the lower hours resulting from income effects and expansions in tax-and-transfer systems.

What drives diversification of national food supplies? Choudhury, Samira, Headey, Derek D., 2016-12-09 Although the diversification of national food supplies (DFS) is a necessary (but not sufficient) condition for the diversification of diets and for reductions in undernutrition in poor countries, little previous research has analyzed how DFS varies across countries and regions, how rapidly it has changed over time, and what economic, social, and agroecological factors may be driving these observed patterns and trends in DFS. The study addresses those questions through a cross-country analysis. We first review economic theory and evidence on the diversification of production and diets in developing countries, particularly the importance of economic growth and other structural transformation processes, as well as the scope for agroecological factors to shape consumption outcomes in the presence of market imperfections, such as high transport costs. We then construct and analyze a rich cross-country dataset linking a simple DFS indicator—the share of calories supplied by nonstaple foods—with a wide range of economic, social, infrastructural, and agroecological indicators. Descriptive evidence and regression analyses show that several indicators of structural transformation (economic growth, urbanization, and demographic change) are strong predictors of DFS within countries. However, the results also suggest that time-invariant agroecological factors are significantly associated with DFS, such that some countries have exceptionally low or high DFS relative to their level of economic development. We discuss the implications of these findings for food and nutrition strategies, particularly the challenge of accelerating dietary diversification in the absence of sustained and very rapid economic growth and structural transformation, especially in countries where agroecological conditions additionally hinder access to a more diverse food basket.

Running High School Cross-Country, The Southwest Way P.M. Hall, 2020-09-29 The dominance of Southwest High School cross-country is outlined from the beginning, in 1942, through to 1980.

The phenomenal success of the program is explained. We follow the authors' journey through his senior season, in 1972. See how the author uses the "Southwest System" during his coaching career to obtain many successes over a 30+ year coaching career. The book has running tips scattered throughout for any level of high school or middle school runner, no matter what the experience level. It also has coaching tips and anecdotes throughout as well as a summary at the end of the book.

Coaching Cross Country Successfully Pat Tyson,Doug Binder,2013-09-10 In Coaching Cross Country Successfully, Pat Tyson shares his secrets to building one of today's elite cross country programs. While there are many instruction books on running, only Coaching Cross Country Successfully provides a blueprint to building a successful team: • Establishing and communicating a coaching philosophy • Tailoring training to individual and team needs • Teaching running techniques and improving performance • Preparing for meets and competition • Evaluating individual runners and your entire program • Working with assistant coaches, volunteers, and the community As one of the winningest cross country coaches in the United States, Pat Tyson developed his philosophies of training and competition by associating with legendary runners and coaches. He was a teammate and roommate of Steve Prefontaine while he was running at the University of Oregon for Coach Bill Bowerman. Coaching Cross Country Successfully draws on this breadth of experience, showing you how to inspire your athletes and create your own tradition of excellence.

Cross-Country Report on Inflation International Monetary Fund. European Dept.,2015-07-14

This Selected Issues paper examines the causes and drivers of low inflation in European inflation targeting countries outside the euro area, focusing on the Czech Republic, Poland, Sweden, and Switzerland. It estimates the effects on inflation from the output gap and external factors, including oil price changes, nominal effective exchange rate (NEER) fluctuations, and euro area inflation spillovers. It is observed that external factors have been significant drivers of low inflation recently, though their contributions to inflation and the channels through which they operate vary across countries. Policy responses and options are also discussed, taking into account country-specific circumstances.

Public Debt, Money Supply, and Inflation Gooheon Kwon, Lavern McFarlane, Wayne Robinson, 2006-05 This paper provides comprehensive empirical evidence that supports the predictions of Sargent and Wallace's (1981) unpleasant monetarist arithmetic that an increase in public debt is typically inflationary in countries with large public debt. Drawing on an extensive panel dataset, we find that the relationship holds strongly in indebted developing countries, weakly in other developing countries, but generally not in developed economies. These results are robust to the inclusion of other variables, corrections for endogeneity biases, and relaxation of common-slope restrictions and are invariant over sub-sample periods. We estimate a VAR to trace out the transmission channel and find the impulse responses consistent with the predictions of a forward-looking model of inflation. Wealth effects of public debt could also affect inflation, as posited by the fiscal theory of the price level, but we do not find supportive evidence. The results suggest that the risk of a debt-inflation trap is significant in highly indebted countries, and pure money-based stabilization is unlikely to be effective over the medium term. Our findings stress the importance of institutional and structural factors in the link between fiscal policy and inflation.

Competing in Cross-country Skiing Bengt-Herman Nilsson,1974-01-01 Discusses the techniques of cross-country skiing, the equipment and its upkeep, cross-country races and how to prepare for them, and champions of the sport.

The Complete History of Cross-Country Running Hutchinson Andrew Boyd,2018-01-16 In The Complete History of Cross-Country Running, author Andrew Boyd Hutchinson captures the full history of cross-country running, from the early 1800s to the present day, on both a national and international scale. It includes chronicles of legendary teams, inspirational tales of achievement, controversies, and interviews with record-breaking runners past and present. From Walter George and Alfred Shrubbs to Steve Prefontaine, Bill Rogers, and Galen Rupp—and everyone in between—Hutchinson uncovers all angles, via training logs, discussions with coaches, and the review of newspaper archives for race results and forgotten storylines. He offers commentary from Olympians such as David Torrence and Shannon Rowbury, amongst others. Along the way, the book addresses the following topics: • How cross country began in England • How the sport found its way to American colleges and universities • The birth of the International Cross-Country Championships • All the close events, including the 2012 race between Molly Huddle and Sara Hall at the US National Cross-Country Championship • And so much more!

Cross-Country Running & Racing Jeff Galloway,2010-10-07 Annotation This book presents all the training necessary to train for cross-country races. Galloway's successful training program explains how to build endurance, train and race on hills, varied terrain running, speed training, race strategies, maximizing performance, and reducing the risk of injury.

Tradition Class Pride Ben Rosario,2015-07-15 Authors Ben Rosario and Jim Linhares unleash the secrets to building a high school cross country dynasty in this incredibly unique book on coaching. They cover everything from pre-season parent meetings to post-season awards banquets, as well as how to train and peak for Championship meets. In between, Linhares shares stories of success (and failure) from his 25 year career.

XC! High School Cross Country in Michigan Jeff Hollobaugh,2020-05-21 The definitive history of high school cross country in the state of Michigan, 1921-2019, brings to life the traditions and memories of the most challenging of high school sports. The legendary coaches and athletes and the races--in heat, snow, rain and mud--come to life in this compilation, which focuses on the state finals, as well as the Detroit City Championships from 1931-1960 (when Detroiters did not participate in MHSAA events). Also included: a history of Michigan the Mideast Meet of Champions, the Foot Locker Nationals and the NXN, as well as a review of Michigan high schoolers who have qualified for Team USA in cross country. Hundreds of pictures. And stats galore, including a complete record of teams that have raced at the Lower Peninsula Finals. In addition, this history introduces the new Legacy Ratings for the state of Michigan.
