3010: Become the Machine Herman Jenkins, 2019-06 3010: Become the Machine is the story of Jason Joshua who faces difficult choices while navigating the negative temptations of being a star high school athlete. Jason's dreams of playing in college are gunned down in a pick-up basketball game. Jason is then transformed and led on a journey into a future world where sport is no more and virtual gaming reigns. We become consumed with understanding how his transformation will impact both his current life (where, tragically, he is now in a coma fighting for his life), and the future world, where he must master technology and a gaming culture he inherently despises. In Jason's journey to discover and reconcile this paradox, he encounters twists and turns that surprise along the way. His story becomes a social commentary on the current impact and intersection of sports, technology, and e-gaming cultures. We learn that while greed and corruption can manifest from the human spirit, these self-centered aspects of humanity can be overcome through belief in a greater good.
