Chronicles of Care: A Design History of the COVID-19 Virus

Paul A. Rodgers, Fernando Galdon, Craig Bremner, 2024-04-16 The Covid-19 crisis and the designed interventions that the authors have catalogued in this book prove definitively that design does care. The authors documented this as it evolved every day from the 1st January 2020 to 31st May 2020 inclusive. Then they looked at all of this care and caring from the point of view of design and, by the sheer volume of design interventions they have documented, illustrate that design is good in a crisis. What the Covid-19 pandemic illustrated is that for the first time in modern history, capital was totally irrelevant. Money could not save your life. Only design could. Rapidly designed masks, shelters, hospitals, instructional posters, infographics, dashboards, respirators, sanitisers, virtual and local communities emerged to save us. From January 2020, design became king. The Covid-19 global pandemic presented an ontological reality; design is more than margins or profit. In fact, design became extremely valuable when it stopped concentrating on those things and started to care about peoples' lives. This brief episode in history is still repositioning the status of design and reconfiguring its signifier from consumption to care. The contents of this book cover the outbreak, lockdown, and the beginning of the reopening in the UK. In between, the book functions as a history of pandemic crisis design interventions. As such it is a "research-in-the-moment project" where we have illustrated our thoughts and insights in tables, charts and diagrams. We have accepted all design interventions as valid and given them the same role and status by presenting each of them in a standard format. No curation. No selection. No position. The task of critical analysis must follow – perhaps by us, certainly by others.

Organizing Relationships Patricia M. Sias, 2008-10-15 Organizing Relationships makes a contribution to the discipline in its treatment of this area from multiple perspectives, in its deliberate engagement/suggestions of future research directions, and its functional purpose of bringing together extant research on this important topic in a coherent and organized way. It adds cumulatively to our knowledge of organizational communication and relationships, it fits within the horizon of the established parameters of our field while opening new areas for engagement, and, moreover, it is a very interesting read. As I Rest, Let My Face Touch Heaven Matthew "Maasaw" Howard,2021-02-20 An intriguing earthen ovate earthen burial mound stretching over two hundred feet long and over forty feet tall stabilized by a mantle of floral species just off the central quadrangle deserted and alone has a peculiar topographic appearance and is obviously of human construction. Bear Spirit Mountain archaeological site shows great progress as research continues by Archaeologist Matt Howard and his team. JOHN THORTON HILLERARY Retired Geologist, USGS Book Author Matthew Maasaw Howard's two books, Avonvdo Yona (Bear Spirit Mountain) An Ancestral Awakening and most recently, As I Rest, Let My Face Touch Heaven, are not traditional academic works...and this is what makes for their vitality and strength. As a Roman archaeologist and historian, I share a passion for understanding the past by unearthing and identifying long-buried or forgotten structures, monuments, artifacts, and man-made images. Matt's books clearly demonstrate his respect for the rigor and discipline of archaeology with his methodical researching, cataloging, documenting, and preserving the stone monuments, artifacts, burials, and rock art imagery. Matt Howard is uniquely qualified and positioned to serve as the chosen Protector of this most sacred and ancient Native American burial and ceremonial site. I find Matt's journey, as recorded in these books, is truly mesmerizing. DR. FRANCES S. BERNSTEIN, PH.D., ANCIENT HISTORY Archaeologist, Assistant Professor, Retired Author-Classical Living: Reconnecting with the Rituals of Ancient Rome The archaeological site known as Bear Spirit Mountain is one of the most significant discoveries made in the field of American Indian history found to date. This site dates to the late Pleistocene period and is a tremendous source of archaeological study for ancient American Indian customs and traditions. The sheer size of the site that measures in miles instead of acres has makes it stand out as one of the largest sites ever discovered in the Americas. JACK HRANICKY, RPA Archaeologist, Professor Book Author-Over fifty books published regarding the Pleistocene Period American Indian History For many years, the study of the indigenous stone monuments of the eastern U.S. has suffered from neglect on the part of professional archaeologists. It has fallen to dedicated and inspired amateur researchers like Matt Howard to document these enigmatic structures. With little formal training or equipment, Matt has provided a very significant contribution to the study of these monuments in his area, and he has drawn attention to their importance to the descendants of their creators, and to all of us as a matter of cultural heritage. I commend his efforts, and I encourage him to continue to document this important cluster of sites. DR. CURTISS HOFFMAN, PH.D., PROFESSOR EMERITUS OF ANTHROPOLOGY Bridgewater State University Noted Archaeologist and Anthropologist Author of Stone Prayers: Native American Constructions of the Eastern Seaboard

_____ As I Rest, Let My Face Touch Heaven, receives its inspiration from the American Indian Chief that one day looked down on several mountains and saw that they were formed by the Creator for his tribe to use as a ceremonial and burial site. It details the many thousands of years of hard work that went into the building and using one of the largest and oldest ceremonial/burial sites in all of the western hemisphere.

What the Face Reveals Paul Ekman, Erika L.

Rosenberg, 2005-04-14 While we have known for centuries that facial expressions can reveal what people are thinking and feeling, it is only recently that the face has been studied scientifically for what it can tell us about internal states, social behavior, and psychopathology. Today's widely available, sophisticated measuring systems have allowed us to conduct a wealth of new research on facial behavior that has contributed enormously to our understanding of the relationship between facial expression and human psychology. The chapters in this volume present the state-of-the-art in this research. They address key topics and questions, such as the dynamic and morphological differences between voluntary and involuntary expressions, the relationship between what people show on their faces and what they say they feel, whether it is possible to use facial behavior to draw distinctions among psychiatric populations, and how far research on automating facial measurement has progressed. The book also includes follow-up commentary on all of the original research presented and a concluding integration and critique of all the contributions made by Paul Ekman. As an essential reference for all those working in the area of facial analysis and expression, this volume will be indispensable for a wide range of professionals and students in the fields of psychology, psychiatry, and behavioral medicine.

Paleoneurology of Amniotes María Teresa Dozo,Ariana Paulina-Carabajal,Thomas E. Macrini,Stig Walsh,2022-11-22 This book presents a detailed examination of the current state of knowledge in the field of paleoneurology in the main amniote groups (reptiles, birds and mammals), and advances resulting from new non-invasive technologies. The study of fossil endocasts is an area of considerable current interest, and has long been central to our understanding of the evolution of the brain, development of senses and behavioral adaptations in diverse vertebrate groups and across vertebrates as a whole. Recent advances in non-invasive imaging have significantly increased the number of fossil taxa for which brain morphology is known, and it may now be possible to quantitatively analyze the relative size of brain regions. Providing a general overview of current perspectives and problems in evolutionary neuroanatomy, this book is intended for a wide range of readers, including undergraduate and graduate students, teachers, and anyone with a special interest in paleoneurology. It is also useful as supplementary reading for courses in digital anatomy, vertebrate comparative anatomy, computed morphometrics, paleontology, neurology and radiology as well as evolution programs
