1918 Spanish Flu Sean Locke,2020-07-02 What if we could finally shed light on the 1918 Spanish Flu, the influenza that killed more people in twenty-four months than AIDS killed in twenty-four years, more in a year than the Black Death killed in a century? 1918 marked the first collision of science and epidemic disease and some aspects still not clarified. The Spanish Flu pandemic of 1918 was the deadliest pandemic in history. The 1918 flu was first observed in Europe, the United States and parts of Asia before swiftly spreading around the world. The virus H1N1 infected an estimated 500 million people worldwide, which at that time was about one-third of the planet's population, and killed an estimated 20 million to 50 million victims, including 675,000 Americans, because at the time, there were no effective drugs or vaccines to treat this killer flu strain. Children were left orphaned and families were devastated. As many American soldiers were killed by the 1918 flu as were killed in battle during World War I. And no area of the globe was safe. The Spanish influenza pandemic of 1918-1919, which caused approximately 50 million deaths worldwide, remains an ominous warning to public health. Many questions about its origins, its unusual epidemiologic features, and the basis of its pathogenicity remain unanswered. [...] Understanding the 1918 pandemic and its implications for future pandemics requires careful experimentation and in-depth historical analysis. - PubMed 1918 Spanish Flu: Causes, facts and numbers of the deadliest ever world influenza Pandemic by Sean Locke will try to finally shed light on the deadliest pandemic of human history thanks to reliable data and statistics. Here is what you are going to find inside of 1918 Spanish Flu: The question of the place of origin and the time of origin Reliable data and statistics The structure surrounding the spread of influenza Lesson learnt from 1918 Spanish Flu Pandemic: world impact and economic consequences Differences between other pandemics ...and much, much more! He love history since he was only 9 years old as this was his favorite subject. Has always had top marks in history, but he is always been also good in science and scientific subjects in general. Sean Locke's passion for history remained for his whole life even if he decided to follow a medical biotechnology career. In the last years Sean started gathering information about some viruses he had to study as a biotechnologist, including H1N1 virus, responsible of the spread of Spanish Flu in 1918. Sean Locke's passion for history pushed him to also gathering information about historical and economic consequences of the spread of this influenza. The result of his researches were collected in a book, 1918 Spanish Flu, which tries to shed light on the not clarified aspects of the pandemic. Sean Locke's book is clear and easy to understand even if it contains specific and scientific explanations, everybody can read it without difficulties. The Threat of Pandemic Influenza Institute of Medicine,Board on Global Health,Forum on Microbial Threats,2005-04-09 Public health officials and organizations around the world remain on high alert because of increasing concerns about the prospect of an influenza pandemic, which many experts believe to be inevitable. Moreover, recent problems with the availability and strain-specificity of vaccine for annual flu epidemics in some countries and the rise of pandemic strains of avian flu in disparate geographic regions have alarmed experts about the world's ability to prevent or contain a human pandemic. The workshop summary, The Threat of Pandemic Influenza: Are We Ready? addresses these urgent concerns. The report describes what steps the United States and other countries have taken thus far to prepare for the next outbreak of killer flu. It also looks at gaps in readiness, including hospitals' inability to absorb a surge of patients and many nations' incapacity to monitor and detect flu outbreaks. The report points to the need for international agreements to share flu vaccine and antiviral stockpiles to ensure that the 88 percent of nations that cannot manufacture or stockpile these products have access to them. It chronicles the toll of the H5N1 strain of avian flu currently circulating among poultry in many parts of Asia, which now accounts for the culling of millions of birds and the death of at least 50 persons. And it compares the costs of preparations with the costs of illness and death that could arise during an outbreak.
