Residential Insurance on the U.S. Gulf Coast in the Aftermath of Hurricane Katrina

James W. Macdonald, Lloyd S. Dixon, Laura Zakaras, 2010 The hurricane seasons of 2004 and 2005 brought devastating losses of life and property; they also threw the residential insurance market in the Gulf States into turmoil. Insurance premiums skyrocketed, a number of private insurers retreated from coastal regions, government insurance programs stepped into the breach, and premiums in high-risk areas were subsidized by taxpayers and by policyholders in low-risk areas. To make matters worse, thousands of residents who suffered hurricane damage resorted to the courts to resolve coverage disputes with their insurers. All in all, the residential insurance system did not function well. Policymakers, deeply divided about how to reform the system to deal with these issues, have so far been unable to build consensus on how to proceed. This paper informs the current policy debate by diagnosing the problems confronting the residential insurance market and proposing objectives for a well-functioning market. The authors examine impediments limiting the private and public sectors' ability to achieve these objectives and identify a range of policy reforms that merit attention. --From publisher description.

Information on Proposed Changes to the National Flood Insurance Program Orice M. Williams, 2009-06 The Nat. Flood Insur. Program (NFIP) currently has 5.6 million policyholders that are insured for $1.1 trillion. The program collects $2.9 billion in annual premiums. As of Jan. 2009, NFIP owed $19.2 billion to the U.S. Treasury, primarily as a result of loans that the program received to pay claims from the 2005 hurricane season. This is a briefing on: (1) the percentage and geographic distribution of policyholders that purchase the max. NFIP coverage; (2) the availability of private commercial and residential flood insur.; (3) the potential effect of adding bus. interruption coverage to commercial flood insur., particularly for small and medium-sized bus.; and (4) the challenges and issues surrounding the potential creation of an NFIP loss fund. Gulf Coast Rebuilding Stanley J. Czerwinski, 2008 The devastation caused by the Gulf Coast hurricanes presents the nation with unprecedented challenges as well as opportunities to reexamine shared responsibility among all levels of gov't. All levels of gov't., together with the private & nonprofit sectors, will need to play a critical role in the process of choosing what, where, & how to rebuild. Agreeing on what the costs are, what federal funds have been provided, & who will bear the costs will be key to the overall rebuilding effort. This testimony: (1) places federal assistance provided to date in the context of damage estimates for the Gulf Coast; & (2) discusses key federal programs that provide rebuilding assistance to the Gulf Coast states.
