Exploring Hong Kong Steven K. Bailey, 2009 Exploring Hong Kong presents a vivid and multidimensional portrait of Hong Kong, one of Asia's most exciting cities. Inspired by his 20-year love affair with Hong Kong, Steven K. Bailey has transformed the typical Hong Kong guidebook by dispensing with the usual laundry lists of sights, hotels, and restaurants. In their place are thoughtfully written chapters that offer the author's personal perspective on how to best explore Hong Kong. From dolphin watches and back-country hikes to street markets, temples, and ferry rides, Exploring Hong Kong contains 40 richly detailed experiences that will unite travelers with the soul of one of the most dynamic cities in Asia. Transit Maps of the World Mark Ovenden, 2015-11-03 A completely updated and expanded edition of the cult bestseller, featuring subway, light rail, and streetcar maps from New York to Nizhny Novgorod. Transit Maps of the World is the first and only comprehensive collection of historical and current maps of every rapid-transit system on earth. In glorious, colorful graphics, Mark Ovenden traces the cartographic history of mass transit—including rare and historic maps, diagrams, and photographs, some available for the first time since their original publication. Now expanded with thirty-six more pages, 250 city maps revised from previous editions, and listings given from almost a thousand systems in total, this is the graphic designer's new bible, the transport enthusiast's dream collection, and a coffee-table essential for everyone who's ever traveled in a city.

Impacts of Mass Transit Railway (Mtr) on Urban Land Development Lingya Guan, 2017-01-26 This dissertation, Impacts of Mass Transit Railway (MTR) on Urban Land Development: a Case Study of West Island Line in Hong Kong by Lingya, Guan, 2017, was obtained from The University of Hong Kong (Pokfulam, Hong Kong) and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons: Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License. Abstract: Transportation investment impact on land development is always an attractive issue to politicians, planners, investors, developers, and academicians. It is because that transportation development is viewed as an economic growth generator, and built environment is believed to have been shaped by transportation system. In particular, rail transit system's development and its impact on land use pattern and property development is regarded as having the ability to enhance accessibility level, consequently result in higher land value within the neighborhood, higher degree of aggregation at the center, and higher density near the stations or interchanges. Many studies have been implemented, endeavoring to reach a consensus on what the impacts are and what the functioning mechanism is. However, hardly any consensus has been reached due to the case-by-case feature of the study. With an interest in understanding the impacts of newly opened West Island Line on changes in land development at the three station areas, this study has adopted an empirical study approach based on urban economic theory of the location theory. Through the support of GIS and statistical techniques, the study of planning permission applications from 2000 to 2015 has demonstrated that West Island Line do have impacts on land development activities, since planning applications are mostly for commercial and composite residential uses, and most applications are located to the vicinity of the three stations. Moreover, three outcomes have been generated from the analysis, they are: higher value uses and developments are indeed more attractive to stakeholders, rather than low-profit constructions; planning applications tend to concentrate around station areas, rather than relatively peripheral areas; speculations of higher land value because of MTR's development do exist. The study is believed to have the ability of becoming a reference for better developing West Island Line, as well as showing a direction for further rail transit development carried out by Hong Kong SAR Government and MTRC. Public Private Partnerships Robert M. Clark, Simon Hakim, 2019-10-18 This book discusses Public-Private Partnerships (PPPs) and their potential to protect and maintain critical infrastructure in a variety of global governmental settings. Critical infrastructure is defined as essential services that underpin and support the backbone of a nation's economy, security, and health. These services include the power used by homes and businesses, drinking water, transportation, stores and shops, and communications. As governmental budgets dwindle, the maintenance of critical infrastructure and the delivery of its related services are often strained. PPPs have the potential to fill the void between government accounting and capital budgeting. This volume provides a survey of PPPs in critical infrastructure, combining theory and case studies to provide a comprehensive view of possible applications. Written by a diverse group of international experts, the chapters detail PPPs across industries such as transportation, social infrastructure, healthcare, emergency services, and water across municipalities from the US to New Zealand to Hong Kong. Chapters discuss objectives and legal requirements associated with PPPs, the potential advantages and limitations of PPPs, and provide guidance as to how to structure a successful PPP for infrastructure investment. This book is of interest to researchers studying public administration, public finance, and infrastructure as well as practitioners and decision makers interested in instituting PPPs in their communities.

Abstract: Abstract of thesis entitled From Metro to Metropolis: Production and Reproduction of Urban Spaces in Hong Kong by the MTR submitted by YEUNG YUK SING WILSON for the degree of Master of Philosophy at The University of Hong Kong in April 2004 This thesis claims the MTR system as an important architecture of movement in the establishment of the Hong Kong metropolis. It examines the space of the MTR in Hong Kong from the viewpoint of Henry Lefebvre's production of space. It aims to elucidate the social interactions among the MTR space, the city's urban spaces and city dwellers of the metropolis after the construction and operation of the MTR system since 1979. The central argument of this thesis is that we shape our MTR and our MTR shapes us; consequently, we share our MTR to shape the metropolitan space of Hong Kong. The thesis argues, first of all, that the MTR space is a distorted reproduced space based on the original urban space of the city. The MTR, initially a representation of the original metropolis, has transformed itself into a real empire-the metropolis. The MTR space overlaps, interferes with, and even threatens the original metropolis of Hong Kong. The first spatial realm, the representations of space and the second, the spaces of representation of the MTR are illustrated by ten spatial images of the MTR system: (1) Mass Transit System; (2) infrastructure project; (3) network of streets; (4) longitudinal building structure; (5) layering structure; (6) caves, holes, underground passages and burrows; (7) labyrinth, maze and rhizome; (8) historical timeline and historical record; (9) map; and (10) hourglass and reverse motion of a film. The third spatial realm, spatial practice, is finally analysed in terms of Lefebvre's rhythmanalysis, and it is argued that city dwellers are able to transform the confined MTR space into their own living spaces through tactical spatial performance to live out the appropriate time within the space. Above The City Alicia M. Kershaw,Ginger Thrash,2005-01-01 Above the City: Hiking Hong Kong Island is a unique comprehensive guide to walks and hikes on Hong Kong Island. Many Hong Kong residents and visitors enjoy a few famous hikes, but then are at a loss to find more routes. Above the City takes the walking enthusiast beyond the well-trodden paths and explores all the walks available on Hong Kong Island. Walkers can find outings to suit their every mood, and variations on well-known and well-loved walks. Every walking route on the Island is described in detail, including distance and difficulty ratings. The hikes are organized around “hubs,” allowing easy identification. They also are indexed by special interests, such as routes that can be run, that are suitable for families, or the most scenic. Directions to the walks by public transportation and by car are provided, and local amenities, such as rest stops, restaurants and local historical sites are listed. Local residents who are seeking more walking choices, walking groups, or visitors to Hong Kong will find Above the City an invaluable hiking companion. “Can beguiling, solitary hiking trails exist just kilometres from Hong Kong’s crowded streets? Or wild summit panoramas beckon ‘above the city’? Alicia Kershaw and Ginger Thrash know they do. With ample practical hints, and obvious delight in hiking, the authors guide us along the many wonderful trails on Hong Kong Island. Knowing the joys of hiking—and how steep Hong Kong hills can seem!—they encourage us to put on our hiking boots.” —Edward Stokes, Hongkong Conservation Photography Foundation “Even more helpful for residents than for visitors, Above the City offers clear, concise directions to places seemingly out-of-the-way, yet close to the city. Practical, helpful details, such as bus routes, points of access and places to eat or relax, are interspersed with out-of-the-ordinary elements of local history and ecology, all engagingly brought together in a chatty, enthusiastic style. Above the City should be an essential companion for any walk across ‘over-crowded’ Hong Kong Island’s beautiful open spaces.” —Jason Wordie, Hong Kong historian and author
