Anthropological Perspectives on the Religious Uses of Mobile Apps Jacqueline H. Fewkes,2019-10-10 This edited volume deploys digital ethnography in varied contexts to explore the cultural roles of mobile apps that focus on religious practice and communities, as well as those used for religious purposes (whether or not they were originally developed for that purpose). Combining analyses of local contexts with insights and methods from the global subfield of digital anthropology, the contributors here recognize the complex ways that in-app and on-ground worlds interact in a wide range of communities and traditions. While some of the case studies emphasize the cultural significance of use in local contexts and relationships to pre-existing knowledge networks and/or non-digital relationships of power, others explore the globalizing and democratizing influences of mobile apps as communication technologies. From Catholic confession apps to Jewish Kaddish assistance apps and Muslim halal food apps, readers will see how religious-themed mobile apps create complex sites for potential new forms of religious expression, worship, discussion, and practices.

Intellectual Property Valuation and Innovation Ruth Taplin,2013-10-15 With the recent global economic crisis, attitudes and practices in relation to intellectual property valuation are changing as exemplified by the dichotomy explained in this book, which makes it unique. While there has been a move towards global harmonisation in terms of valuation of both tangible and intangible assets that are based on innovation, there is also a tendency against global harmonisation because of cultural attitudes and practices of different countries. This can be seen most acutely in relation to intellectual property valuation in Asia, especially East Asia, which often differs from the West's perception of valuation. The book is written by experts in intellectual property, valuation and innovation who are mainly practitioners covering innovators, marketers, accountants, social innovators and business and management academics. The breadth and practitioner background of most of the contributors make the material relevant to those involved in valuation, economics, business, management, accounting and finance, law and maritime insurance. This book takes an interdisciplinary approach that cross-cuts all the above-mentioned disciplines and takes the understanding of intellectual property valuation to a new level.

Digital Technology and Justice Tania Sourdin,Jacqueline Meredith,Bin Li,2020-11-24 Justice apps – mobile and web-based programmes that can assist individuals with legal tasks – are being produced, improved, and accessed at an unprecedented rate. These technologies have the potential to reshape the justice system, improve access to justice, and demystify legal institutions. Using artificial intelligence techniques, apps can even facilitate the resolution of common legal disputes. However, these opportunities must be assessed in light of the many challenges associated with app use in the justice sector. These include the digital divide and other accessibility issues; the ethical challenges raised by the dehumanisation of legal processes; and various privacy, security, and confidentiality risks. Surveying the landscape of this emergent industry, this book explores the objectives, opportunities, and challenges presented by apps across all areas of the justice sector. Detailed consideration is also given to the use of justice apps in specific legal contexts, including the family law and criminal law sectors. The first book to engage with justice apps, this book will appeal to a wide range of legal scholars, students, practitioners, and policy-makers.

Parkinson's Disease Management through ICT Joan Cabestany,Angels Bayes,2022-09-01 Parkinson's Disease (PD) is a neurodegenerative disorder that manifests with motor and non-motor symptoms. PD treatment is symptomatic and tries to alleviate the associated symptoms through an adjustment of the medication. As the disease is evolving and this evolution is patient specific, it could be very difficult to properly manage the disease.The current available technology (electronics, communication, computing, etc.), correctly combined with wearables, can be of great use for obtaining and processing useful information for both clinicians and patients allowing them to become actively involved in their condition.Parkinson's Disease Management through ICT: The REMPARK Approach presents the work done, main results and conclusions of the REMPARK project (2011 – 2015) funded by the European Union under contract FP7-ICT-2011-7-287677. REMPARK system was proposed and developed as a real Personal Health Device for the Remote and Autonomous Management of Parkinson's Disease, composed of different levels of interaction with the patient, clinician and carers, and integrating a set of interconnected sub-systems: sensor, auditory cueing, Smartphone and server. The sensor subsystem, using embedded algorithmics, is able to detect the motor symptoms associated with PD in real time. This information, sent through the Smartphone to the REMPARK server, is used for an efficient management of the disease.

Creating Mobile Apps Without Coding Neil Perlin,2014-03-19 "Mobile" is changing how business is done. Mobile apps can let your company work in new ways to boost customer loyalty and satisfaction and build new revenue streams. And having your own apps can brand the company as forward-thinking and edgy, or just plain "cool." But how do you get those apps?You can check in Apple's App Store and Android's Play Store, but those apps are generic. They'll do some of what you need... You can get a custom app created for your specific needs, but creating apps takes programming skill and is expensive and time—consuming, possibly expensive enough to be unaffordable and time-consuming enough to be unable to quickly respond to changing business needs. Until now...New app development tools are creating a world of DIY (Do-It-Yourself) apps. If you have an analytical bent and know how to use standard business tools like Microsoft® PowerPoint and Excel, you may be able to create your own apps, yourself, in days or weeks rather than months, and inexpensively. This book explains how.The book first introduces DIY apps in general – their rationales, design principles, and more. It then focuses on a specific tool called ViziApps. You'll learn about ViziApps' features and get step-by-step instructions for creating a simple but real app that's complete except for being in the stores. You'll do this with no coding. When you finish, you'll have a feel for DIY app creation and a working app. Quickly, and with no coding.
