The Divine Office E. J. Quigley,2015-07-19 Excerpt from The Divine Office: A Study of the Roman

Breviary I hope that this book may serve as an introductory manual to the study of the Breviary. It may be useful to junior students in colleges, in giving them some knowledge of the Church's Hours, which they assist at in their college choirs. It may assist them to know and love the official prayers of the Church, and may help to form devout habits of recitation, so that, when the obligation of the daily office is imposed on them, they may recite it digne, attente et devote. The texts and intentions may be an aid to them, and to students in Holy Orders, in the great and glorious work of pious prayer. On the Roman Breviary as Embodying the Substance of the Devotional Services of the Church Catholic

John Henry Newman, 1838

The Breviary Explained Pius Parsch, 2023-09-19 Fr Pius Parsch, one of the most eminent members of the original Liturgical Movement, furnishes us in this book with an unmatched guide to the riches of the (preconciliar) Breviary of the Catholic Church. To quote from the author himself: The Breviary is the official prayerbook of the Church. The Holy Ghost and the Church have been working on it for more than 3,000 years, and it has become the basic book of prayer, a precious common fund to which the great men of prayer from every age have contributed their thoughts and sentiments. The two chief objectives which the breviary fulfills are: it is the prayer of the Church as a body, and it is a guide to genuine spiritual growth for the individual soul. In private prayer I pray, mostly, for myself and my own affairs. It is the isolated person who stands in the centre of the action, and the prayer is more or less individualized. But in liturgical prayer, and therefore in the breviary, it is not primarily I who am praying, but the Church, the bride of Christ. The object of her prayer is broader, too: all the needs of God's kingdom here on earth. In liturgical prayer, I feel more like a member of a great community, like a little leaf on the great living tree of the Church. I share her life and her problems. The Church is praying through my mouth, I offer her my tongue to pray with her for all the great objectives of redemption, and for God's honour and glory. We weep, too, or rather the Church weeps through our tears, together with those who weep, rejoices through our joys together with those who rejoice, does penance with the repentant. All the sentiments of Holy Mother Church find their echo in our heart. This gives a deeper content to our prayer; we spread out far beyond our own selves.

The Roman Breviary Jules Baudot,2017-10-21 Excerpt from The Roman Breviary: Its Sources and History II. To write the history of the Roman Breviary is, In other words, to describe its formation, the develop ments through which it has gone, and the transfor mation to which it has been successively subjected. The book of public prayer was not a work which could be perfected at once; it was a work which slowly took shape under the united influence Of people and clergy, each century contributing something to its construction. The divine authority Of the Pontiffs intervened only at a later stage, and then rather to con trol the process of development than arrest it. The institution Of the Congregation of Rites by Sixtus V., the modifications introduced by Leo XIII. At the close Of the nineteenth century, and the creation of a litur gical commission by the same Pontiff, all show us that if the Official prayer-book remains unchanged as a whole, it can yet in our own days be brought to a still higher degree Of perfection in matters Of detail.
