A Journey of Discovery Terry W. Johnson,2016-12-27 Wildlife biologist Terry Johnson has written a weekly column for the Monroe County Reporter for more than twenty-five years. These columns have taken readers on a journey of discovery that has wound its way through backyards and the countryside. Each week his readers eagerly await his next column to see where the journey leads them next. Johnson has now published a collection of more than seventy of his columns. These columns are packed with fascinating glimpses into the lives of the plants and animals that live in middle Georgia. Through Johnson's work readers are regaled with tips on transforming yards into wildlife havens. He reveals there really are black bluebirds and whether or not wild plants and animals can predict the weather. Johnson explains why birds attack windows, how deer stay warm in winter, and exposes the chorus frog as a false prophet. There is discussion about how more birds can be attracted with water than food, why mistletoe is much more than a holiday decoration, and that more species of hummingbirds are seen in winter than at any other time of the year. Johnson's charming columns lovingly chronicle the changing seasons and foster the belief that healthy wild plant and animal populations enhance our quality of life. He also encourages his readers to spend more time outside and enjoy the wonders of nature hiding in plain sight just outside their backdoor.

Lewis & Clark Dayton Duncan,Ken Burns,1999-08-31 The beautifully illustrated story of two unlikely friends who led the United States' first expedition in search of the fabled Northwest Passage–based on the acclaimed PBS documentary. In the spring of 1804, at the behest of President Thomas Jefferson, a party of explorers called the Corps of Discovery crossed the Mississippi River and started up the Missouri, heading west into the newly acquired Louisiana Territory. The expedition, led by two remarkable and utterly different commanders–the brilliant but troubled Meriwether Lewis and his trustworthy, gregarious friend William Clark– was to be the United States' first exploration into unknown spaces. The unlikely crew came from every corner of the young nation: soldiers from New Hampshire and Pennsylvania and Kentucky, French Canadian boatmen, several sons of white fathers and Indian mothers, a slave named York, and eventually a Shoshone Indian woman, Sacagawea, who brought along her infant son. Together they would cross the continent, searching for the fabled Northwest Passage that had been the great dream of explorers since the time of Columbus. Along the way they would face incredible hardship, disappointment, and danger; record in their journals hundreds of animals and plants previously unknown to science; encounter a dizzying diversity of Indian cultures; and, most of all, share in one of America's most enduring adventures. Their story may have passed into national mythology, but never before has their experience been rendered as vividly, in words and pictures, as in this marvelous homage by Dayton Duncan. Plentiful excerpts from the journals kept by the two captains and four enlisted men convey the raw emotions, turbulent spirits, and constant surprises of the explorers, who each day confronted the unknown with fresh eyes. An elegant preface by Ken Burns, as well as contributions from Stephen E. Ambrose, William Least Heat-Moon, and Erica Funkhouser, enlarge upon important threads in Duncan's narrative, demonstrating the continued potency of events that took place almost two centuries ago. And a wealth of paintings, photographs, journal sketches, maps, and film images from the PBS documentary lends this historic, nation-redefining milestone a vibrancy and immediacy to which no American will be immune.

Mississippi to Africa Melvin J. Collier,2012-05-24 Mississippi to Africa captures Collier's fourteen-year journey in unearthing the buried history of his maternal grandmother's family - a journey that took him back seven generations, from northern Mississippi to the Piedmont hills of South Carolina, and even back to a specific people and region in West Africa where his ancestry undoubtedly began. Trekking the paths of his ancestors and their displaced relatives before Emancipation (1863), this emotion-filled journey traversed down an intricate paper trail of federal, state, and local records, other public records, and oral histories, presented in a narrative style to inspire, entice, and propel readers into the fascinating world of genealogy and historical discoveries. Collier also uncovered the ways in which his ancestors ingeniously retained aspects of their African heritage. DNA technology confirmed his research findings and verified ancestral ties. The reader will gain many research tips and techniques along the journey.

Lewis and Clark on the Trail of Discovery Rod Gragg,2003 Few events in American history have shaped the nation like the Lewis and Clark Expedition. It opened the American West for settlement. It redrew the map of the United States. It identified an array of native peoples, spectacular places, fascinating creatures, and extraordinary flora unknown in civilized America. It defined the American nation as a land stretching from coast to coast-and it launched the spread of population in a mighty frontier migration unlike anything ever witnessed in America before or since. Lewis and Clark on the Trail of Discovery contains 19 chapters, detailing the expedition chronologically. A museum in a book, this fascinating volume contains re-creations of original documents such as diary entries, letters, maps, and sketches-all meticulously reproduced so that the reader can actually handle and examine them. Among the documents included in the book are: The actual letter of credit Jefferson wrote to Lewis committing the U.S. government to pay for the expedition. The code Thomas Jefferson provided to Lewis for sending secret messages. Clark's sketch of the technique some Indians used to flatten their heads, a sign of prestige. Clark's letter of gratitude to Sacagawea, a Shoshone teenager who helped the expedition. A newspaper account of the expedition's return to St. Louis.

A Journey of Discovery Sharon a. Sudds,2014-03-12 You may ask who should read this book. Who would benefit from this discovery? The answers are here for anyone who has asked the following questions: For what purpose was I born? My human existence is for what reason? Am I needed, am I valuable, am I loved and if so by whom? Have you ever asked the questions: where did I come from, why am I here, why now, and where am I going? Some people feel they will never know the answers, however that is not the truth. The right question will reveal the manifold wisdom of God, the mystery of life. I will share with you what the Holy Spirit has shared with me about ability versus identity, taking your heart back from trespassers, living your life on empty, what it means to hear and obey, and the power you have as a speaking spirit. There is a question we must all ask ourselves. It is a personal, important, and necessary question. It's personal because you are the only one who can ask it. It's important because, knowing the answer can lead to why you are here. It's necessary because your ability and purpose is hidden in it, and when it's discovered we are empowered to execute God's plan.

My Journey of Self-Discovery is to help kids, like myself, become more aware of who we are while sharing the things we enjoy. It's also a great way for us to bond with our parents, family and friends. About Me: I'm Caison, a native Atlantan who's parent moved to Memphis, Tennessee shortly after birth. I soon relocated back at the age of 5. I'm currently in the 3rd grade learning virtually and can't wait to return to the classroom. I have a 5 year old sister who we call Maddi but her real name is Madalyn. I'm pretty small for my age but I have a large vocabulary. I enjoy swimming, playing games and reading; especially my Dog Man collection. In the first grade I won my class Spelling Bee and in the second grade the Reading Bowl team that I was apart of won second place in the Reading bowl competition. I love traveling and excited about the first time I'll experience an ride airplane. I have a huge family and look forward to spending time over the summer in Memphis.
