Media U John Marx, Mark Garrett Cooper, 2018-08-21 Are homecoming games and freshman composition, Twitter feeds and scholarly monographs really mortal enemies? Media U presents a provocative rethinking of the development of American higher education centered on the insight that universities are media institutions. Tracing over a century of media history and the academy, Mark Garrett Cooper and John Marx argue that the fundamental goal of the American research university has been to cultivate audiences and convince them of its value. Media U shows how universities have appropriated new media technologies to convey their message about higher education, the aims of research, and campus life. The need to create an audience stamps each of the university's steadily proliferating disciplines, shapes its structure, and determines its division of labor. Cooper and Marx examine how the research university has sought to inform publics and convince them of its value to American society, from the rise of football and Great Books programs in the early twentieth century through a midcentury communications complex linking big science, New Criticism, and design, from the co-option of 1960s student activist media through the early-twenty-first-century reception of MOOCs and the latest promises of technological disruption. The book considers the ways in which universities have used media platforms to reconcile national commitments to equal opportunity with corporate capitalism as well as the vexed relationship of democracy and hierarchy. By exploring how media engagement brought the American university into being and continues to shape academic labor, Media U presents essential questions and resources for reimagining the university and confronting its future.

Violence in the media Désiré Arnold, 2004-03-02 Seminar paper from the year 2003 in the subject American Studies - Culture and Applied Geography, grade: good, University of Potsdam (Institute for Anglistics/ American Studies), course: PS/ GK Introduction to Media Science, 25 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: What is 'violence'? Kunczik says it is "an intentional physical or/and psychical damage to a person, a living being or a thing, through another person."1(15) Theunert considers violence only between human beings. "Offenders and victims are always one or more persons."2(89) Kunczik says one also could differentiate between concrete violence and fictional violence, as well as between natural and artificial violence. Concrete violence is about shown behaviour, which results in violence, either physical or psychical. Fictional violence is only the presentation of it. And so natural violence means the real and genuine violence, for example shown in movies. And at last the artificial representation means the unreal representation, for example shown in cartoons. 2. History of Violence in the Media Historically spoken, violence in the media is not a phenomenon of the present; already the ancient Greeks were confronted with it. Kunczik (19) states that each new medium was judged negatively in the beginning. It all started with Plato. In his work "Politeia" he accuses tales and myths to stand in contrast to an honourable adult life, and so children and youngsters should be kept away from these. At this point Aristotle, a former student from Plato sets in. He formed a thesis called thesis of catharsis. 3 So one can see that the topic violence already derives from the ancient world. For example Homer and his "Odyssey" as well as Aeneas and his work "Aeneid". Also the Grimms and Busch made use of violence in their tales. This goes on to Shakespeare and his plays, for example in "Hamlet" they fight, an act of violence, or "Macbeth". Goethe as well used a kind of violence, when his "Werther" 4 commits suicide. Critics of that time feared many suicides (and many suicides are said to have happened after reading this work).

Modern transfer of cultures considering as example of a German radio-homepage Tanja Kasper, 2006-08-02 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject Sociology - Culture, Technology, Peoples / Nations, grade: 1,7, University of Vaasa, course: Transfer in Literature and the Media, 0 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: Is it possible to transfer the basics about another culture in 724 words? Or if not, what else can be gained? This shall be an essay to explore in which way different cultures present each other in modern times, illustrated on the basis of a German homepage presenting several information about Finland. The very popular German radio station EINS LIVE publishes this page. The choice was made because it's so popular, it applies one of the most modern information ways and present an interesting composition of the information. Furthermore one can assume that these information are relative important for the future image of Finland in Germany, because the target group of this radiostation is the generation between 14-30 and therefore the future generation of a more and more accreting Europe. First of all there will be given some more necessary information about the analysed homepage and its publisher. Afterwards, every topic will be analysed which and in which way information is given. Finally it should be tried to reflect why this choice was made. That means the way in which the performing culture influences the choice and how far this gives information about the illustrated culture. The final aim here is to draw conclusions how transfer of a culture works or is practiced in modern Media and times.

Audience Orientation in News Stories Elisabeth Fritz, 2009-10 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, grade: 1,3, University of Augsburg (Lehrstuhl für Englische Sprachwissenschaft), language: English, abstract: Every day new things happen. With modern technology, news can be distributed all over the world and faster than ever before. Additionally, the distribution of (and access to) news has become much cheaper. Consequently, the number of sources we can get information from has increased drastically throughout the last decades, as has the amount of information. In our modern information society, the mass media have come to play a decisive role. At the same time, it becomes more and more difficult to judge the reliability of the news. One of the oldest forms of mass media, which is still generally regarded as trustworthy, is the newspaper. When it comes to newspapers, people usually prefer one (or two) specific newspapers to others. Every newspaper has its own specific image which includes some characteristics that it is generally known for. If all newspapers provided all the news there is and reported it in an objective manner, this would not make much sense. Indeed, with the amount of potential news emerging every day and the restrictions of the medium, it is impossible to cover everything - the newspapers must choose what to include in their coverage and what not to. Similarly, it is an illusion to expect news to be reported completely objectively. One reason for this is that the medium language inherently conveys connotations and values, which makes a purely objective coverage simply impossible. But apart from this restriction, it is a well-known fact that newspapers all have their particular perspective from which they contemplate and present news. However, this is not solely the newspapers' choice. Since they are financially dependent on their readers who buy their issues, they have to do their best in order to meet their readerships' interests. Consideri
