Messenger from God Anthony DiVerniero, 2019-01-05 The charred steel girders of the World Trade towers, a nuclear explosion, storms and tsunamis, a beautiful woman, an ancient prophecy, and a government that wants to discredit him... Paolo DeLaurentis has the prophetic gift of Nostradamus and is haunted by visions foretelling catastrophic events. Does he possess a gift or a curse? Is it the beginning of the dystopian era? 1963, a third grade boy, Paolo gets sick. His parents, doctor, and a priest watch in awe as the child lies in a cold bath at death's door. He is enveloped in a globe of white light and recovers. Two years later, Paolo awakens from a dream of a woman—the love of his life. He won't meet her for another thirty years, and the dream is forgotten when another vision—the tragic deaths of two of his friends—comes true. After college, a desire deep within Paolo beckons him to travel to his grandfather's village of Ottati, Italy. This begins Paolo's quest to find life's balance of love, tragedy, forgiveness, and identity. Despite lingering threats from his nemesis, NSC director Doctor Colin Payne—a high-ranking government official—Paolo combines what he learned in Italy with his gift of prescience to become a wealthy businessman, charismatic leader, husband, and father. He finds the woman from his dreams and their love is so powerful it just might change the world. Paolo is generous with his financial and spiritual wealth as he lives his life searching for beauty and truth. But when his visions of tragedy escalate, will he be able to warn the world in time? Book Review: A tightly written novel about a modern-day Messiah. —Kirkus Reviews In DiVerniero's debut, sensitive, introspective Paolo DeLaurentis has had clairvoyant dreams and visions since he was a small child. His strange talents seem to come and go, and the rest of his working-class Italian family doesn't need such powers to predict a gloomy future for humanity: "[T]he people of our country are headed on a path of destruction," his father warns. "Drugs, money, no morals—evil is lurking." When that future arrives, it finds wealthy, charismatic 39-year-old Paolo a phenomenally successful businessman, president and founder of Ottati Consulting Ltd. It also finds him being carefully watched by Dr. Payne, who was among the first to examine Paolo's extrasensory powers when he was a child, and who has monitored his development ever since. Paolo is a beneficent businessman, and he's a source of support and comfort to his friends and family, but when he loses his best friend as well as the love of his life, he gradually comes to understand that he has a higher calling; he sees a dark future approaching humanity, and he wants to help the world avoid it. "I love you," he tells one of the many large audiences for speeches he regularly gives, "and ask that The love you have inside of you be released from the prison of evil and given to your fellow man." Payne, on the other hand, wants to use Paolo's powers for personal gain and world domination (although, in one of the book's more amusing threads, Paolo is never fooled by Payne, offhandedly calling him a "scumbag" to anybody who'll listen). DiVerniero skillfully handles the plot, increasing the pace of events. Paolo, though unfailingly perfect, is never boring, and the numerous characters are portrayed with individuality and humor. In particular, the reverence and affection Paolo's family and friends feel for him is effectively evoked. The climax is smartly bittersweet -- Kirkus Reviews

A Messenger so Dark Joel Pierson, 2012-04-28 Tristan Shays is beginning to think he may be a messenger after all. After leaving his job as president of his own company, he embarks on a mission to investigate the clandestine and potentially evil agency known only as SODARCOM. The trouble is, he's gone rogue, following his own path rather than the assignments he usually gets—visions of strangers in peril that he must warn, accompanied by intense pain if he refuses. With no divine guidance to assist them, he and his new best friend, Genevieve, must rely on instinct and luck to find answers about SODARCOM's drug study for cancer patients. The missions keep coming, diverting Tristan from his goal of getting answers. Even so, when his assignments start relating to people involved in the drug study, he suspects he's on the right track. The closer he gets to the answers he seeks, the more danger he and Genevieve encounter. Torn between his promise to keep Genevieve safe and his need to see justice served, Tristan must rely on all his resources just to come out alive, let alone victorious. The fifth book in the Messenger series, A Messenger So Dark challenges popular beliefs about right and wrong and asks a difficult question: is survival a right or a privilege?

Digitalization and Industry 4.0: Economic and Societal Development Hans-Christian Brauweiler, Vladimir V. Kurchenkov, Serik Abilov, Bernd Zirkler, 2020-07-29 Economies are changing – independent from their status, i.e. industrialized, threshold or developing. Technological advancement, e.g. in information or telecommunication, and environmental concerns make people rethink present and future activities. Many challenges can only be tackled internationally or interdisciplinary. The articles of WHZ conferences with DAAD-Alumni and partners from 20 nations take various problems and approaches to solutions into focus. The editors hope some of the ideas to give further thought to similar problems in other regions or areas of science or economy. About the Editors: H.-Ch. I don't know what it means. I do know that I fell in love when I was 17, and it is a love that I hope to never regret. I'm glad I wrote it down.

For Hire, Messenger of God Art Burton, 2010-05 Well-known and wealthy, Matthew Lane drives his cherry red Cadillac like he owns the road. Some would describe his compulsive driving as maniac. So when Lane's speeding car collides with a power pole, killing him instantly, it's likely that the incident is just another fatal traffic accident. Detective Sergeant Jim McDonald, a sixteen-year veteran policeman, is on the same road as Lane that day. The accident comes within a coat of paint of including him on the casualty list. As an eyewitness and first on the scene, McDonald senses there is something strange about the accident. These suspicions dominate his waking life in ways he doesn't believe possible. McDonald's misgivings are further confirmed with two subsequent car accidents. The first involves a victim intoxicated to the point that driving a car seems almost impossible. The second event shocks the detective with a case of now you see me, now you don't. McDonald must discover the evidence that links the three accidents before anyone else loses their life.

The Messenger Elizabeth Robins, 2019-12-12 The Messenger is a tale from which is adapted suffragette Elizabeth Robins's famous play, Votes for Women! Robins's was the first play to bring the street politics of women's suffrage to the stage. Votes for Women! led to a surge in suffrage theater. Excerpt: After all, we aren't yet living in the millennium, Julian. What I'm afraid of is that someday you'll be wanting to carry these notions of yours beyond the bounds of what's reasonable. You mean, said the other young man, with a flash in his dark eyes, you mean you're afraid I may just chance to be honest in my 'notions,' as you call them, of a scheme of social justice.
