Josh Kaufman

168 Hours Laura Vanderkam, 2011-05-31 It's an unquestioned truth of modern life: we are starved for time. We tell ourselves we'd like to read more, get to the gym regularly, try new hobbies, and accomplish all kinds of goals. But then we give up because there just aren't enough hours to do it all. Or if we don't make excuses, we make sacrifices- taking time out from other things in order to fit it all in. There has to be a better way...and Laura Vanderkam has found one. After interviewing dozens of successful, happy people, she realized that they allocate their time differently than most of us. Instead of letting the daily grind crowd out the important stuff, they start by making sure there's time for the important stuff. When plans go wrong and they run out of time, only their lesser priorities suffer. Vanderkam shows that with a little examination and prioritizing, you'll find it is possible to sleep eight hours a night, exercise five days a week, take piano lessons, and write a novel without giving up quality time for work, family, and other things that really matter.

Let's write your thesis in 30 hours Richardson Ciguene,2021-10-27 Now is the time to write your thesis manuscript. For me, this was the most complicated part of my doctoral journey. How did I get there without too much trouble? Thanks to good editorial planning ! That's why I created this planner, based on my own experiences. It only takes 30 hours to complete this planner and 50% of your writing work will be done. I'm not telling you that you will get there without difficulty. But what is certain, this drafting step will be less painful than usual. The principle is simple. Instead of telling you how to do it, I do it with you, step by step. Who is this planner primarily dedicated to ? - To those who have already started their writing but, for some time, procrastinate, stress and swim in place - To those who plan to start writing in the short term How does it work ? In this notebook, you and I will plan the writing of the main blocks of your thesis, i.e. around twenty compulsory sections, such as: preface, table of contents, summary, introduction, contributions, conclusion, list of sources, appendices , etc. Each block will contain globally: - A definition of its function - A presentation of some examples - A list of the main good practices - And your task will be to fill in the blank lines in order to have your first version of each block In the empty lines, you will define: the logical sequence of the contents, the ideas that absolutely must not be forgotten to develop there, the images and bibliographical references not to be forgotten, etc ... At each stage, I'll tell you exactly what to put in the lines to fill out. And then ? Once this work is done, you will just have to follow what is written in the planner until the complete writing of your first manuscript version. This first version will serve as a base that will subsequently have to be improved iteratively with your thesis directors. You are not a doctoral student ? If you know one, know that this planner is one of the best gifts you can give him. Good luck and congratulations dear Dr.

The First 20 Hours Josh Kaufman, 2013-06-13 Forget the 10,000 hour rule— what if it's possible to learn the basics of any new skill in 20 hours or less? Take a moment to consider how many things you want to learn to do. What's on your list? What's holding you back from getting started? Are you worried about the time and effort it takes to acquire new skills—time you don't have and effort you can't spare? Research suggests it takes 10,000 hours to develop a new skill. In this nonstop world when will you ever find that much time and energy? To make matters worse, the early hours of practicing something new are always the most frustrating. That's why it's difficult to learn how to speak a new language, play an instrument, hit a golf ball, or shoot great photos. It's so much easier to watch TV or surf the web . . . In The First 20 Hours, Josh Kaufman offers a systematic approach to rapid skill acquisition— how to learn any new skill as quickly as possible. His method shows you how to deconstruct complex skills, maximize productive practice, and remove common learning barriers. By completing just 20 hours of focused, deliberate practice you'll go from knowing absolutely nothing to performing noticeably well. Kaufman personally field-tested the methods in this book. You'll have a front row seat as he develops a personal yoga practice, writes his own web-based computer programs, teaches himself to touch type on a nonstandard keyboard, explores the oldest and most complex board game in history, picks up the ukulele, and learns how to windsurf. Here are a few of the simple techniques he teaches: Define your target performance level: Figure out what your desired level of skill looks like, what you're trying to achieve, and what you'll be able to do when you're done. The more specific, the better. Deconstruct the skill: Most of the things we think of as skills are actually bundles of smaller subskills. If you break down the subcomponents, it's easier to figure out which ones are most important and practice those first. Eliminate barriers to practice: Removing common distractions and unnecessary effort makes it much easier to sit down and focus on deliberate practice. Create fast feedback loops: Getting accurate, real-time information about how well you're performing during practice makes it much easier to improve. Whether you want to paint a portrait, launch a start-up, fly an airplane, or juggle flaming chainsaws, The First 20 Hours will help you pick up the basics of any skill in record time . . . and have more fun along the way.
