The Electroencephalogram of the Squirrel Monkey (Saimiri Sciureus) in a Very High Magnetic Field Dietrich Eberhard Beischer, James C. Knepton (Jr), 1966 In preparation for an appraisal of the possible effect of strong magnetic field on cerebral function electroencephalograms of squirrel monkeys subjected to strong homogeneous and gradient fields (up to 91,250 oersted) were measured. Higher than normal amplitudes and frequencies were found in the recordings from exposed animals. The unusual EEG records are discussed and an attempt is made to explain the observation. The study is part of a plan to investigate interaction of magnetic fields with the nervous system in general. (Author).

Experimental Determination of Dose for the Monkey in a Reactor Pulse Environment J. H. Dowling, 1966 A study was made of a series of pulse exposures of the monkey using a pulsing TRIGA reactor. The reported doses are based on the kerma calculated from threshold foil data for fast neutrons and the gamma exposure determined by silver activated glass rods. These values were compared with extrapolated (by monitoring sulfur) values determined using tissue equivalent ionization chambers for total dose, a Hurst proportional counter for fast neutron dose, and a graphite - CO₂ ionization chamber and a tetrachloroethylene chemical dosimeter for gamma dose. From Red Hot to Monkey's Eyebrow Robert M.

Rennick, 2014-04-23 Of course you'll find Paradise in Kentucky, but it's only one of the many unusual place names in the Commonwealth. Meeting these names for the first time, visitors and residents alike assume that some clever or funny stories lie behind them. So they ask, how did Elkhorn Creek get its name? Were the roads to Red River really Hell each way? Did bugs really tussle in Monroe County? Why was everyone whooping for Larry? To be hospitable and helpful, Kentuckians have come up with convincing—if not always truthful—answers to these and other questions about how places got their names. Some of these stories were clearly not intended to be believed, though a few of them have been anyway. From Red Hot to Monkey's Eyebrow presents some of the classic accounts of Kentucky's oddest place names. Complete with map, index, and humorous drawings by Linda Boileau, this handy guide is a delight.

The Nile Mosaic of Palestrina Paul G.P. Meyboom, 2015-08-24 The famous Nile Mosaic of Palestrina, ancient Praeneste in central Italy, dating to c. 100 B.C., is one of the earliest large mosaics which have been preserved from the classical world. It presents a unique, comprehensive picture of Egypt and Nubia. The interpretation of the mosaic is disputed, suggestions ranging from an exotic decoration to a topographical picture or a religious allegory. The present study demonstrates that the mosaic depicts rituals connected with Isis and Osiris and the yearly Nile flood. The presence of these Egyptian religious scenes at Praeneste can be explained by the assimilation of Isis and Fortuna, the tutelary goddess of Praeneste, and by the interpretation of the mosaic as a symbol of divine providence.

Pynchon Character Names Patrick Hurley, 2015-03-18 The dictionary lists each character from Pynchon's fiction up through his most recent novel, including the most likely etymology of each name. In addition, the thorough introduction examines Pynchon's character names as a part of his greater literary strategy, establishing a set of categories through which most of the names may be understood.
