Educators, students, administrators, and health professionals shared ideas, stories, and data in an effort to discuss the future of HPE by learning from past experiences. Topics included: evaluation of online education; innovations in interprofessional education and learning opportunities within the social determinants of health and mental health; effects on preclinical and clinical education; regulatory and accreditation changes affecting HPE; and stress and workload on students and faculty. Handbook of Research on Advising and Developing the Pre-Health Professional Student Schwartz, Lisa S.,Ganjoo, Rohini,2022-04-29 Despite significant demand for healthcare professionals in the workforce, admission to health professional graduate programs is highly competitive with less than half of all medical school applicants gaining admission annually. The application process is nuanced, complex, and costly, which can often be a significant barrier to otherwise highly qualified students, particularly those from backgrounds underrepresented in the healthcare workforce. Further understanding of the best practices in navigating the application processes, academia, and professional development is crucial for those advising pre-health students. The Handbook of Research on Advising and Developing the Pre-Health Professional Student considers current practices and research regarding academic and extracurricular preparation of undergraduate students who wish to enter health professions and offers new pre-health professional advisors as well as more seasoned advisors and other administrators a resource to assist them in their professional journey. Covering a range of topics such as advisor relationships and lifelong learning skills, this major reference work is ideal for advisors, healthcare professionals, academicians, researchers, practitioners, scholars, instructors, and students.

Dr. Anderson convincingly explains that a vibrant lifestyle is not an accident and certainly takes a fair bit of effort. On the flip side, poor health, sickness, and accelerated degeneration are usually not an accident either. The sad truth is that poor health ultimately takes far more effort to deal with and pay for in the long run. He understands that before someone can make good choices, they must ask and get good answers to the right questions. Then, they must be inspired and encouraged to make good choices and act on them. Your body is made to function, perform and cooperate with you and take you all the places you want to go. If you don't take care of it, where will you live?
