Peducahans in History Fred G. Neuman,2015-06-25 Excerpt from Peducahans in History The history of Paducah links itself with the lives of its native or adopted sons and daughters whose names shine upon the local, State and National page. As soldier, statesman and author their work grows brighter with the years, inspiring the young and stimulating the old. On the battle field they gave themselves, as statesmen they were the people's tribunes, as authors they contributed richly to the treasure-house of literature. Unostentatiously they shared honors with the greatest, drank freely from the cup of success; then the chaplet of laurel was thrown aside, the trump of fame disregarded. In all that was done they reckoned themselves as secondary in the achievement of a purpose, and this self-effacement prompted in no small measure the investigations revealed by these sidelights. More than a hundred friends are due thanks for courtesies extended while the chapters were in preparation. Dr. E. B. Curd of Hazel, and Captain William T. Rigby of the Vicksburg National Military Park Commission were exceedingly kind in supplying valuable data. Captain T. P.. Fauntleroy of Kevil, and Captain Edwin P. Farley of Paducah answered inquiries that resulted in the presentation of new matter. Miss Harriett Boswell of the Paducah Carnegie Library, and the assistant librarians, very generously offered the volumes of that institution for research. Judge E. W. Bagby of Paducah was frequently consulted, his wide reading and personal knowledge of the subjects discussed proving exceptionally advantageous. Mr. W. G. McFadden of Paducah made possible the reproduction of several rare pictures which had never been in print. Particular thanks are due Mr. V. Blaine Russell for reading manuscript and proof, and offering suggestions. Without his sympathetic assistance the pen portraits would have lacked far less color and the events of their time lost much of the interest they might possibly contain. The preparation of the book has been a pleasure and if by it the life or deeds of any subject are illumined the writing has not been in vain. My Paducah Barron White, 2002 A look into the lives of some of Paducah's most interesting characters spanning from the early years through war and up to present day notariaty.

Kentucky Confederates Berry Craig, 2014-10-03 During the Civil War, the majority of Kentuckians supported the Union under the leadership of Henry Clay, but one part of the state presented a striking exception. The Jackson Purchase—bounded by the Mississippi River to the west, the Ohio River to the north, and the Tennessee River to the east—fought hard for separation and secession, and produced eight times more Confederates than Union soldiers. Supporting states' rights and slavery, these eight counties in the westernmost part of the commonwealth were so pro-Confederate that the Purchase was dubbed the South Carolina of Kentucky. The first dedicated study of this key region, Kentucky Confederates provides valuable insights into a misunderstood and understudied part of Civil War history. Author Berry Craig begins by exploring the development of the Purchase from 1818, when Andrew Jackson and Isaac Shelby acquired it from the Chickasaw tribe. Geographically isolated from the rest of the Bluegrass State, the area's early settlers came from the South, and rail and river trade linked the region to Memphis and western Tennessee rather than to points north and east. Craig draws from an impressive array of primary documents, including newspapers, letters, and diaries, to reveal the regional and national impact this unique territory had on the nation's greatest conflict. Offering an important new perspective on this rebellious borderland and its failed bid for secession, Kentucky Confederates will serve as the standard text on the subject for years to come.

Irvin S. Cobb William E. Ellis, 2017-09-29 This biography of a little-remembered Southern humorist “delivers on its claim that Cobb’s life is emblematic of changes that registered on a larger scale” (Journal of Southern History). “Humor is merely tragedy standing on its head with its pants torn.” ?Irvin S. Cobb Born and raised in Paducah, Kentucky, humorist Irvin S. Cobb (1876–1944) rose from humble beginnings to become one of the early twentieth century's most celebrated writers. As a staff reporter for the New York World and Saturday Evening Post, he became one of the highest-paid journalists in the United States. He also wrote short stories for noted magazines, published books, and penned scripts for the stage and screen. In Irvin S. Cobb: The Rise and Fall of a Southern Humorist, historian William E. Ellis examines the life of this significant writer. Though a consummate wordsmith and a talented observer of the comical in everyday life, Cobb was a product of the Reconstruction era and the Jim Crow South. As a party to the endemic racism of his time, he often bemoaned the North's harsh treatment of the South and stereotyped African Americans in his writings. Marred by racist undertones, Cobb's work has largely slipped into obscurity. Nevertheless, Ellis argues that Cobb's life and works are worthy of more detailed study, citing his wide-ranging contributions to media culture and his coverage of some of the biggest stories of his day, including on-the-ground reporting during World War I. A valuable resource for students of journalism, American humor, and popular culture, this illuminating biography explores Cobb's life and his influence on early twentieth-century letters.

With Your Shield Shining Nelson Reed, 2008 The Civil War has been written about in every possible way, and for me to add to this extensive library, I required my own war-one that might have taken place after Longstreet was allowed to flank the Union left on the Gettysburg, resulting in a Confederate victory. This allowed a young lieutenant to meet my great grandmother in a small town in western Missouri. A painting and several daguerreotypes attest to her beauty if not to her emotional development, on which I have allowed myself to imagine what no relative has imagined before. The lieutenant, when not courting a girl in her teens, finds himself training country boys with weapons that were available, if not generally used in that other war; he gains promotion after promotion, and then goes south with famous generals, where there is a lot of gunfire and more promotions. Warfare has changed little in eighty years. The human condition, with all the youthful hopes, temptations and victories has changed even less, and permit us to recreate and relive that earlier time.
