New Persian Language and Linguistics Shahram Ahadi, 2002 Interest in the Persian language has grown during the last few decades, as a consequence of which numerous studies and analyses of different size have been made. The present bibliography is a selection of essays, articles and monographs on the New Persian Language (including the variants Dari and Tajik and in addition local and regional accents such as Tehrani, Isfahani, and Shirazi Persian) written - up to the year 2001 - in the following languages: Persian, Arabic, English, French, German, Italian. Apart from the subject matter aspects like relevance to Persian, topicality and reliability were decisive, too. The present material has not been listed according to strict library usage, but the author has tried to combine the accuracy and conciseness of the entries with userfriendliness. Certain kinds of type (small capitals, italics) are intended to make it easier for the reader to find their way through the mass of information and moreover the reader is given further details which possibly offer more information than the title itself. For optimal use of the enclosed bibliography five indexes (Chronological Index, Subject Index, Language Index, Word Index, Person and Title Index) have been provided which offer the reader special information.

Index Medicus Persiana Hebatollah et.al.,2017-03-05 This collection of Persian medical manuscripts, being published in a facsimile form for the first time,should appeal to anyone interested in the history of Persian medicine. Its historical value is due to the fact that the collection covers almost all the classical period during which the Persian language wasused to write on medical subjects (beginning of the fifth to the end of the thirteenth century A.H.), and includes the works of the most prominent authors such as: Zarrindast, Islamil Djurdjani Mansur b. Muhammad b. Ahmad, Hadji Zain al-Attar, and Muhammad Arzani needless to add here that themanuscripts themselves are extremely rare and are housed in the museums of some limited number of universities, where the access to them is also quite difficult. The facsimile publication of these manuscripts, therefore, will afford a rare opportunity for the scholars to refer to these original works more readily. The manuscripts have been faithfully rendered in the print form keeping true to the originals as well as the notes, remarks, and comments made thereon. The original manuscripts being extremely old and rare are mostly in a very dilapidated state. The restoration of the pages for the facsimile to be made possible has been a very painstaking work for the publishers. But the effort would have been amply rewarded by the ready access to these rare works of medical writing and its development in Persia, by scholars, libraries and medical collections.

Dari Grammar and Phrase Book Ehsan M. Entezar, 2010. Dari Grammar and Phrasebook is the result of many years of research and teaching. It has two parts. Part one (grammar) is a systematic presentation of Dari sound system (phonology, word formation (morphology) and sentence structure (syntax). Each chapter begins with an introduction. This is followed by analysis of the new concepts providing plenty of examples and illustrations. Next comes the chapter summary. Each chapter in part one ends with exercises. Part two (phrasebook) is about how to communicate with Afghans on a variety of situations (topics). This part first discusses language functions such as asking, ordering, requesting, apologizing, persuading, and so on. The second part is about topics or situations involving shopping, health, transportation, security, government and so on. The relevant vocabulary under each topic is listed into nouns, verbs and adjectives. The topics also include cross-cultural notes and proverbs.
