Translocated Fishes in Streams of the Wet Tropics Region, North Queensland Damien W. Burrows,2004 Translocations have been occurring in the Wet Tropics for around one hundred years, mostly done by private individuals and involving low numbers of fish. However, the Recreational Fishing Enhancement Program, a DPI initiative which began in 1986, and the development of mass-hatchery techniques in the last twenty years, has greatly increased the number of fishes stocked. Evidence suggests that up to 36 freshwater fish species plus red claw crayfish have been translocated into waters of the Wet Tropics. Despite the extent of stockings that have occurred to date, and the important faunal components of Wet Tropics streams that are considered to be vulnerable to predation by novel fish predators, no environmental evaluations for fish stocking have been undertaken in the Wet Tropics. The distribution of translocated fishes in streams of the Wet Tropics is not adequately known, nor is the extent of overlap between translocated fishes and potentially vulnerable species such as frogs and crustaceans.

Freshwater Fishes of Far North Queensland Brett Herbert,John Peeters,1995 This illustrated field guide to the fishes of the area north of Cardwell describes each species, and provides information on their behaviour, habitat, and uses. Also discusses topics such as fishing and handling techniques, venomous fish and treatment of fish stings. Includes a glossary and an index. In the Queensland DPI 'Information' series. Herbert is a fisheries biologist at the Freshwater Fisheries and Aquaculture Centre, Walkamin. Peeters is a senior inspector with the Department of Environment and Heritage in Queensland.

It includes detailed information on their identification, evolutionary history, breeding biology, feeding ecology, movement patterns, macro-, meso- and micro-habitat use, water quality tolerances, conservation status and current threats, as well as environmental flow and management needs. Based on the results of extensive field surveys and a comprehensive review of existing literature, it is designed to assist environmental practitioners and managers to make informed decisions about future management strategies. It will also encourage a greater research effort into the region's aquatic fauna by providing a comprehensive resource that enables other researchers to adopt a more quantitative and strategic framework for their research. Joint winner of the 2005 Whitley Medal.

Field Guide to Marine Fishes of Tropical Australia Gerald R Allen,2009-08-01 This phenomenally successful guide to the wealth and variety of fish in Australia's tropical waters — including the Great Barrier Reef — and south-east Asia has been updated and expanded.
