Turner's Big Radio and Record Adventure Dale Turner,2017-04-27 Imagine playing Ronnie Milsap records on the radio and then working with Mr. Milsap at his Record Label representing his music to stations all over the Midwest. Imagine growing up in St. Louis listening to songs by Brenda Lee on the radio and then years later serving on the Board of Directors of the Country Music Association with her! What an incredible opportunity I've had to enter the world of Radio and Records. But not without bumps in the road...a failed marriage, family addictions, personal and professional relationships out of balance. Yet, what a thrill to work and learn at two of the most iconic corporate brands in the world, RCA and Disney.Come inside and read about being on the road with super group Alabama, introducing Rascal Flatts to radio and my brief work with Garth Brooks. My passion for radio led me to an amazing decade or four in Country Music!

Record Cultures Kyle Barnett,2020 The 1920s was a crucial decade for the recording industry. Large record companies existed, but across the nation there were dozens of small, independently owned and regionally-oriented labels like Black Swan, Champion, Paramount, Gennett, Starr, Okeh, and others which catered to specific genres and audiences that were at the time outside the commercial mainstream: jazz, race records, old time or hillbilly music, local religious music traditions, and exotica from abroad that the metropolitan record companies did not-yet-see as profitable. Kyle Barnett's book seeks to tell the story of the first big wave of consolidation of the record industry, when larger labels began to take an interest in what the smaller labels were doing, the growing pains that resulted in mainstream companies having to adapt their culture to promoting artists from the margins-poor or working class hillbillies, African-Americans-and how the coming of the Depression threatened to turn back the clock of the industry's growth. In hindsight, the evolution of the recording industry toward consolidation looks inevitable, but there is no good, synthetic history of this crucial period that gives due credit to the development of the industry, both commercially and culturally--

On Record Beverley Diamond,2021-05-12 Musical media and the audio recording industry have an important and complex history in Newfoundland and Labrador: professional musicians, community songwriters, local institutions, and even politicians have gone on record. The result is a widespread body of work that undercuts the idea of recorded music as a cultural commodity and deepens the province's tradition of cultural activism. Drawing on contemporary testimony and over fifty years of interviews, On Record explores how recording projects have served as sonic signatures, forms of protest, homage, or parody of the foibles of those in power. Beverley Diamond examines how audio recording in Newfoundland and Labrador has been shaped not merely by creative individuals, but by such events as resettlement, residential schools, the cod moratorium, technological change, and disasters that have befallen those who live and work on the North Atlantic. A chapter by ethnomusicologist and musician Mathias Kom examines the widespread response to a unique annual challenge to make an audio recording. Spanning both commercial and community-oriented initiatives, this book reflects the vibrant, socially engaged, and resilient nature of communities that value simultaneously and equally the highest professional standards and the creative potential of every citizen. Encompassing music from both settler and Indigenous communities, On Record redefines the culture of a province that has most often been associated with traditional music, demonstrating that recording goes beyond the creation of a commodity: it responds to the present and to constructs of public memory.
