Carbon Dioxide Mitigation in Forestry and Wood Industry Gundolf H. Kohlmaier, Michael Weber, Richard A. Houghton, 2013-06-29 The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) has recently summarized the state of the art in research on climate change (Climate Change 1995). The most up to date research findings have been divided into three volumes: • the Science of Climate Change (working group I), • the Impacts, Adaption and Mitigation of Climate Change (working group II), and • the Economic and Social Dimensions of Climate Change (working group III) There is a general consensus that a serious change in climate can only be avoided if the future emissions of greenhouse gases are reduced considerably from the business as usual projection and if at the same time the natural sinks for greenhouse gases, in particular that of CO<sub>2</sub>, are maintained at the present level or preferably increased. Forests, forestry and forestry industry are important parts of the global carbon cycle and therefore they are also part of the mitigation potentials in at least a threefold way: 1. During the time period between 1980 and 1989 there was a net emission of CO<sub>2</sub> from changes in tropical land use (mostly tropical deforestation) of 21.6 +/- 1 GtC/a, but at the same time it was estimated that the forests in the northern hemisphere have taken up 0.5 +/- 0.5 GtC/a and additionally other terrestrial sinks (including tropical forests where no clearing took place) have been a carbon sink of the order of 1.3 +/- 1.

An R and S-Plus® Companion to Multivariate Analysis Brian Everitt, 2005-03-17 Applied statisticians often need to perform analyses of multivariate data; for these they will typically use one of the statistical software packages, S-Plus or R. This book sets out how to use these packages for these analyses in a concise and easy-to-use way, and will save users having to buy two books for the job. The author is well-known for this kind of book, and so buyers will trust that he's got it right.
