Rising Star David Garrow, 2017-05-09 New York Times Bestseller Rising Star is the definitive account of Barack Obama's formative years that made him the man who became the forty-fourth president of the United States—from the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of Bearing the Cross Barack Obama's speech at the 2004 Democratic National Convention instantly catapulted him into the national spotlight and led to his election four years later as America's first African-American president. In this penetrating biography, David J. Garrow delivers an epic work about the life of Barack Obama, creating a rich tapestry of a life little understood, until now. Rising Star: The Making of Barack Obama captivatingly describes Barack Obama's tumultuous upbringing as a young black man attending an almost-all-white, elite private school in Honolulu while being raised almost exclusively by his white grandparents. After recounting Obama's college years in California and New York, Garrow charts Obama's time as a Chicago community organizer, working in some of the city's roughest neighborhoods; his years at the top of his Harvard Law School class; and his return to Chicago, where Obama honed his skills as a hard-knuckled politician, first in the state legislature and then as a candidate for the United States Senate. Detailing a scintillating, behind-the-scenes account of Obama's 2004 speech, a moment that labeled him the Democratic Party's rising star, Garrow also chronicles Obama's four years in the Senate, weighing his stands on various issues against positions he had taken years earlier, and recounts his thrilling run for the White House in 2008. In Rising Star, David J. Garrow has created a vivid portrait that reveals not only the people and forces that shaped the future president but also the ways in which he used those influences to serve his larger aspirations. This is a gripping read about a young man born into uncommon family circumstances, whose faith in his own talents came face-to-face with fantastic ambitions and a desire to do good in the world. Most important, Rising Star is an extraordinary work of biography—tremendous in its research and storytelling, and brilliant in its analysis of the all-too-human struggles of one of the most fascinating politicians of our time.

Jessie's Island Sheryl McFarlane, 2012-12-07 With a long list of activities and events to attend, cousin Thomas paints a picture of city life that makes Jessie's world seem a little dull in comparison. When her mother suggests they invite Thomas to visit their island, Jessie wonders glumly what she could possibly write in her letter that would sound as exciting as zoos, planetariums or video arcades. But as Jessie looks out over her island home, she sees a world of endless variety, from killer whales in the strait and bald eagles soaring overhead to anemones in tide pools and tiny hermit crabs on the shore. She thinks of countless days spent exploring, fishing, swimming and canoeing.

Rising Star, Setting Sun John T Shaw, 2018-05-01 After winning the presidency by a razor-thin victory on November 8, 1960, over Richard Nixon, Dwight D. Eisenhower's former vice president, John F. Kennedy became the thirty-fifth president of the United States. But beneath the stately veneers of both Ike and JFK, there was a complex and consequential rivalry. In Rising Star, Setting Sun, John T. Shaw focuses on the intense ten-week transition between JFK's electoral victory and his inauguration on January 20, 1961. In just over two months, America would transition into a new age, and nowhere was it more marked than in the generational and personal difference between these two men and their dueling visions for the country they led. The former general espoused frugality, prudence, and stewardship. The young political wunderkid embodied dramatic themes and sweeping social change. Extensively researched and eloquently written, Shaw paints a vivid picture of what Time called a "turning point in the twentieth century" as Americans today find themselves poised on the cusp of another watershed moment in our nation's history.

Rising Stars Toni Shelton, 2005-06 COMMERCIAL ACTING OPPORTUNITIES There are two types of commercials, which frequently cast models. Non-air commercials are those not intended for broadcast use, such as non-broadcast audience reaction commercials, copy testing, or client demos. Photomatics are one specific type of client demo - they use a still photographer and the images are converted to video using special techniques to give the feeling of movement, as in ordinary film. Non-air commercials give new actor-models a chance to see what it takes to produce a commercial and provide valuable experience to add to acting resumes. The second type of commercial involves real movement, and may have speaking or non-speaking parts. Models cast for this type of commercial may find themselves modeling clothes, advertising a store, selling a mattress, buying a car, opening a bank account, eating an ice cream - you name it. Speaking parts usually require voice training. Be advised having a regional accent will severely limit your speaking parts. Voice training will be necessary if you are serious about your acting career. A principal part is the position held by the featured actor in a commercial. That actor is the representative of the product the consumer will focus on, and the part may be either speaking or non-speaking. Extra parts, which may be speaking or non-speaking, are held by people who are strategically placed to fill unwanted space in a commercial. Being an extra is a terrific opportunity to learn the inside workings of commercial production without the stress of being a principal. It allows you to observe what is required of the principal actors, the creative process involved, and the roles of the production team. TRAINING Regardless of what country of market the commercials you wish to audition for are aimed at, you must have proper training. To learn more about the commercial acting business, take some on-camera commercial acting class. You'll also learn techniques for psyching yourself up for auditions and overcoming intimidating directors.. Acting in T.V. commercials is lots of fun. It can also be very demanding - doing take after take until it is exactly right. Commercial acting can be a regular and lucrative source of income, you might begin to aspire to higher things. If you develop serious theatrical ambitions, you would be well advised to undertake proper training at a reputable drama school. It is rare to find a theatre professional who gives much credit for commercial acting experience. It just isn't in the same league. The transition between modeling and acting, you face many obstacles. The simple fact is that models are not taken as seriously as classically trained actors, and as a result they must work even harder to gain respect. Any model who wants to act is to immerse themselves into classes. This is not a short term commitment of taking just one class; you need many. A cold-reading class is beneficial because copy is often not available before an audition. I also urge my models to take improvisation acting classes. These teach you how to be free, less inhibited, and not afraid to do something silly. Finally, get a monologue under way and audition for theatre. Models need to separate the two worlds of acting and modeling. Use your composite for modeling and your headshot and resume for acting. Before professional and come prepared to an audition. This means to be on time, know your lines wear the appropriate clothing, listen, take direction, and be self-confident. If you treat acting like a business and treat it with the same enthusiasm and drive you do modeling, success should surely follow. NETWORKING Finally, don't overlook one of the most important resources that an actor can have. This business is about people and abo

Rising Star Rhonda K. Garelick, 2021-01-12 Celebrity personalities, who reign over much of our cultural landscape, owe their fame not to specific deeds but to the ability to project a distinct personal image, to create an icon of the self. Rising Star is a fascinating look at the roots of this particular form of celebrity. Here Rhonda Garelick locates a prototype of the star personality in the dandies and aesthete literary figures of the nineteenth century, including Beau Brummell, Baudelaire, Mallarmé, and Oscar Wilde, and explores their peculiarly charged relationship with women and performance. When fin-de-siècle aesthetes turned their attention to the new, feminized spectacle of mass culture, Garelick argues, they found a disturbing female counterpart to their own highly staged personae. She examines the concept of the broadcasted self-image in literary works as well as in such unwritten cultural texts as the choreography and films of dancer Loie Fuller, the industrialized spectacles of European World Fairs, and the cultural performances taking place today in fields ranging from entertainment to the academy. Recent dandy-like figures such as the artist formerly known as Prince, Madonna, Jacques Derrida, and Jackie O. all share a legacy provided by the encounter between high and early mass culture. Garelick's analysis of this encounter covers a wide range of topics, from the gender complexity of the European male dandy and the mechanization of the female body to Orientalist performance, the origins of cinema, and the emergence of crowd theory and mass politics.

Rising Star Cari Gelber,2006-03 Most teens love music and celebrities, but sixteen year-old Manhattanite Nikki Bellinger is not satisfied with just dreaming about them. But, Nikki has some choices to make. Will she put a personal relationship with a sexy band member ahead of her professional dreams? Should high school class work take second priority to her career goals? Will she let some of the recording industries' top moguls take advantage of her youth, inexperience, and femaleness? From Long Story Short's escapades on the road to Nikki's struggle being a young female in the music business, Rising Star takes a realistic look at almost every teenager's fantasy of touring with a rock band.

Rising Stars in Emerging Markets Yogesh Borkar,2013-11 In Rising Stars in Emerging Markets, Yogesh Borkar explores two overlooked and under-researched realms of the global economy - countries showing exceptional promise of growth within emerging markets, and companies showing strong growth within an emerging market (EM) - to catch rising stars and bring them to light as potential future market leaders carving out niches that could pose challenges to the McDonald's, Wal-Marts and Nestles of the world. Brazilian dental care company Odontoprev, supermarket Puregold Price Club in the Philippines, Mahindra Finance in India, and South African health and beauty retailer Clicks Group are just a few of the many examples of dark horses Borkar has observed running up from the rat race of an uncertain world economy, capitalizing on growing young populations and other demographic and economic changes in their respective regions. Borkar also includes a few examples of frontier markets like Zenith Bank in Nigeria and auto retailer Kolao in Laos that have good long-term growth potential. These are all examples of companies and countries on the cusp of moving to the next economic stratum. While he shares his personal views on each EM from a macroeconomic and socio-political perspective and pinpoints 20 countries in five continents experiencing true economic growth, this book is primarily the brainchild of his passion for identifying, researching and unearthing high quality hidden gems in almost every EM worldwide, regardless of the country's fiscal condition, political state or world reputation. The following of smaller companies is a road less traveled, hence will be an exciting experience for the reader, as well as a testimony of reassurance that the world economy is rebounding, with a little help from the little companies.
