Shop Like a Pro: Why Shopping for Clothes Is a Pain in the Ass and How to Fix It – A Small Guide Isabella Gordillo,2017-10-10 We have all had at least one fashion failure whether it is that expensive shirt we only wore once or that shopping trip that was supposed to be amazing and we ended up returning empty handed because we got tired and overwhelmed. We have all been there and we have all seen people close to use commit these crimes. For example, my aunt can go shopping for hours only to return empty handed (you know who you are, yes I'm writing this for you. This is an intervention!) I identify this as a problem consisting in a wide variety of causes such as not knowing what you want to get before leaving the house, not knowing which items actually enhance your body shape only to try them on and get disappointed, and just giving up without having visited all the options and stores. I wanted to simplify the process in a series of steps so shopping becomes a joy rather than a burden. Shopping is a fun activity, make it a reward rather than the dreaded experience. I started to enjoy shopping when I started to listen to my own style and shopped for the items I actually liked to wear because they were comfortable and went with my personality. One thing you have to take into consideration that's actually an external factor is who you're going shopping with and how you shop best (alone or with company). We all have that one person in our life who doesn't like anything we try on but we also have that one friend who's an enabler and makes us think we need to buy everything we try on because it just looks so good or it's such a good deal. Neither of them are a good companion when going shopping for yourself unless you have a strong character and don't let them influence your decision. I strongly suggest you go shopping all by yourself the first times as it'll be a way of discovering your own shopping style. With this book, I will to teach you how to make shopping an enjoyable and efficient experience. I'm going to walk you through the steps you should follow when shopping for something you had in mind and I'll teach you what to do if you find yourself in a shopping situation you didn't plan for.
