The 8 Keys to Successful Living Finbarr Bassuah,2019-02 This Success book is an absolute must-read for those individuals interested in or pursuing any kind of success in life or any endeavour. This book presents pragmatic and uncommon solutions for anyone who finds themselves in a seemingly impossible situation, in a world plagued with confusions, corruption, financial crisis, relationship issues or fierce competition at home and at work. This book reassures and demonstrates to readers that taking charge of your Mind is the only needful thing to do and how all can be well again. Instead of being comfortable or giving up and accepting society's Standard-Life Offer of a monotonous, auto-pilot-based lifestyle, this book presents another practical alternative you can explore for free. In addition, this book reveals and discusses a new Model of Leadership (PL 2019) that puts selflessness, truth, trust and shared prosperity at the core of generating organisational or group success and development. Within this book are the KEYS to empower you to successfully create and physically manifest your dreams by bridging that enormous and seemingly impossible gap that exists between your dreams and your reality. A radical yet unshakable foundation and protocols for the achievement of personal success is presented in a concise manner, making the principles easy to read and implement. On the topic of Ideas, this book shows that if an idea is revealed to you (alone), it ceases to be mysterious to you (alone). The book also talks about KEYS of wisdom that all great leaders, exceptional personalities and stars of the past have followed or applied to enable them avoid having the same fate as the numerous men and women, who throughout history have fallen prematurely and become victims of strange and unfortunate circumstances.

The Key to Success Russell H Conwell, Russell H. Conwell,2023-06-07 This book is sent out to induce people to look at their own eyes, to pick up the gold in their laps, to study anatomy under the tutorship of their own hearts. One could accumulate great wisdom and secure fortunes by studying his own finger-nails. This lesson seems the very easiest to learn, and for that reason is the most difficult. People are thinking, but they can think much more. The housewife is thinking about the chemical changes caused by heat in meats, vegetables, and liquids. The sailor thinks about the gold in sea-water, the soldier thinks of smokeless powder and muffled guns; the puddler meditates on iron squeezers and electric furnaces; the farmer admires Luther Burbank's magical combinations in plant life; the school-girl examines the composition of her pencil and analyses the writing-paper; the teacher studies psychology at first hand; the preacher understands more of the life that now is; the merchant and manufacturer give more attention to the demand. Yes, we are all thinking. But we are still thinking too far away; even the prism through which we see the stars is near the eyes. The dentist is thinking too much about other people's teeth. This book is sent out to induce people to look at their own eyes, to pick up the gold in their laps, to study anatomy under the tutorship of their own hearts. One could accumulate great wisdom and secure fortunes by studying his own finger-nails. This lesson seems the very easiest to learn, and for that reason is the most difficult. The lecture, The Silver Crown, which the author has been giving in various forms for fifty years, is herein printed from a stenographic report of one address on this general subject. It will not be found all together, as a lecture, for this book is an attempt to give further suggestion on the many different ways in which the subject has been treated, just as the lecture has varied in its illustrations from time to time. The lecture was addressed to the ear. This truth, which amplifies the lecture, is addressed to the eye. I have been greatly assisted, and sometimes superseded, in the preparation of these pages by Prof. James F. Willis, of Philadelphia. Bless him! My hope is by this means to reach a larger audience even than that which has heard some of the things herein so many times in the last forty-five years. We do not hope to give or sell anything to the reader. He has enough already. But many starve with bread in their mouths. They spit it out and weep for food. Humans are a strange collection. But they can be induced to think much more accurately and far more efficiently. This book is sent out as an aid to closer observation and more efficient living.
