The Early Laps of Stock Car Racing Betty Boles Ellison, 2014-09-08 The first organized, sanctioned American stock car race took place in 1908 on a road course around Briarcliff, New York--staged by one of America's early speed maven, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. A veteran of the early Ormond-Daytona Beach speed trials, Vanderbilt brought the Grand Prize races to Savannah, Georgia, the same year. What began as a rich man's sport eventually became the working man's sport, finding a home in the South with the infusion of moonshiners and their souped-up cars. Based in large part on statements of drivers, car owners and others garnered from archived newspaper articles, this history details the development of stock car racing into a megasport, chronicling each season through 1974. It examines the National Association for Stock Car Automobile Racing's 1948 incorporation documents and how they differ from the agreements adopted at NASCAR's organization meeting two months earlier. The meeting's participants soon realized that their sport was actually owned by William H.G. Bill France, and its consequential growth turned his family into billionaires. The book traces the transition from dirt to asphalt to superspeedways, the painfully slow advance of safety measures and the shadowy economics of the sport.

32 Laps Michael Fling, 2013-01-10 It's not in the knowing, it's in the doing. The evolution to becoming relevant with your self, your relationships and your business requires fundamental re-purposing in thinking and culture. Purposed people not only understand this concept, but they also realize that "why" becomes more important than "what." In his new book, Dr. Michael Fling takes you on a journey that blends lessons of creativity, energy and passion that will change how you view your world and will add relevance to personal and professional fulfillment. He relates value driven "tipping points" at the end of each chapter, or lap, that convey the importance of having clarity, drive and an emotional spirit in everyday tasks. You will learn how to create more productive, predictable and sustainable patterns in your business and in your life and how to develop a healthier and more consistent culture of prosperity. 32 Laps reveals the secret to closing the gap between "knowing" and "doing." You will be motivated to look forward, to take action and to change.
