Cost Benefit Analysis of Traffic Light & Speed Cameras Andrew Hooke, Jim Knox, David Portas, 1996

How to Safety Rate Red Light Cameras Donald S. Sawicki, 2011-05-01 Many communities use red light cameras as a revenue source, then claim it is for safety. Some places go so far as to shorten the yellow duration forcing more drivers to run the light (more revenue, less safety and harder braking). To make matters worse many states use an unrealistic (fast) driver reaction time to determine yellow light duration. A way to safety rate a traffic stoplight (including red light cameras) is to determine potential maximum driver braking. Using a realistic driver reaction time, a realistic (objective and predictable) braking number can be determined. Using a braking g's scale (deceleration compared to acceleration due to gravity), braking g's can be used to determine (braking) safety and comparing other stoplights. How To Safety Rate Red Light Cameras explains how to determine braking g's using speed limit, yellow light duration, road grade (incline), and stop bar to clear point (usually intersection) distance. Includes a discussion of factors involved, mathematical model and proof, equations, and braking scale levels. Lookup tables (English and Metric) provided for quickly estimating braking g's. Are Stoplights in your community safe -- this book will show you how to objectively and clearly rate a stoplight.

The 'Real Drivers' Guide to Beating the Speed Camera

Thomas Heavey,2013-03-25 Do you really want protection from the speed camera? Have you ever thought about improving your own driving skills but didn't because of the time or expense? Would you like fewer people killed and injured on our roads? If the answer is 'YES' to all these questions then you're in the right place. There is no better protection from the speed camera and reducing casualties on our roads than the motorists own skill and judgement. Over the years we motorists have allowed our standards to slip which is why so many of us get caught out by speed cameras each year and why thousands are involved in serious, life changing collisions, but it doesn't have to be this way. We can enjoy motoring without causing casualties and avoid punishment at the same time. So why 'Real Driver'? because we are going to use 'real driving' skills to beat the speed camera with not a gadget in sight. The 'Real Driving' exercises are going to take six weeks for you to master. Question is...are you up for the challenge?

Red Light Camera Systems Cynthia Munoz,2015 Red light running is one of the major causes of crashes, deaths, and injuries at signalised intersections. The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) support a comprehensive approach to intersection safety that incorporates engineering, education, and enforcement countermeasures to prevent red light running and improve intersection safety. Red light cameras can be a very effective countermeasure to prevent red light running. There are a number of studies that indicate reduction in crashes at signalised intersections due to red light cameras. The fundamental objective of the research in this book is to determine the effectiveness of RLC systems in reducing crashes. A description of all project efforts is described in this book.

Freeway Traffic State Detection Using CCTV Stationary

Images, 2012 Traffic detection and data collection are essential to transportation planning and management. The CCTV (Closed Circuit Television) traffic cameras have been increasingly deployed for traffic surveillance on major roadways by DOT (Department of Transportation) in the U.S. However, the real-time traffic video data is still very limited to be published online because of the large load to the video servers and internet connections. As a result, the traffic snapshots which are clipped from the video data are widely used as an effective approach to publish the real-time traffic conditions through internet. Currently, almost all U.S. states can provide traffic snapshots via DOT or traveler information websites (511 System). These traffic snapshots are published and updated every 1 minute to 5 minutes in different states. They are potential new traffic data source that can be obtained free from internet without additional equipment and instruction cost. They can provide valuable traffic information to analyze traffic flow patterns and congestion status, where no other detectors are available. How to utilize these online CCTV snapshots effectively for traffic detection and data collection would be of practical significance. In this research, a novel traffic state detection model is developed, which could contribute to both academic and industry fields. The primary contribution of this study is to provide an effective solution to detect the traffic state using the CCTV stationary images. Traffic space occupancy is used as a reliable measure for quantitative traffic analysis and congestion estimation. The practical value of the proposed approach is that it turns widely freely available video source from internet into useful traffic information, and this could be done without interfering the existing CCTV system in DOT. The traffic image data used in this study were collected from I-894 freeway corridor in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. I proposed a model to measure the traffic space occupancy, which could not be measured directly in the field. In addition, a perspective transformation method is provided to estimate the traffic parameters without accurate camera calibration. The proposed algorithms and image processing were implemented in MATLAB. The model validation is performed with field loop detector data collected from the same roadway segments. The model performance was evaluated under different traffic status, illumination conditions, and roadway geometry. The validation and evaluation results indicate that the proposed model has a robust detecting capability for traffic status.
