iNetSec 2009 - Open Research Problems in Network Security Jan Camensich, Doğan Doğan, 2009-10-26 The working group WG 11.4 of IFIP ran an iNetSec conference a few times in the past, sometimes together with IFIP security conference, sometimes as a stand-alone workshop with a program selected from peer-reviewed submissions. When we were elected to chair WG 11.4 we asked ourselves whether the security and also the computer science community at large benefits from such a workshop. In particular, as there are many (too many?) security conferences, it has become difficult to keep up with the field. After having talked to many colleagues, far too many to list all of them here, we decided to try a different kind of workshop: one where people would attend to discuss open research topics in our field, as typically only happens during the coffee breaks of ordinary conferences. To enable this we called for abstracts of 2 pages where the authors outline the open problems that they would like to discuss at the workshop, the intent being that the author would be given 15 minutes to present the topic and another 15 minutes for discussion. These abstracts were then read by all members of the Program Committee and ranked by them according to whether they thought this would lead to an interesting talk and discussion. We then simply selected the abstracts that got the best rankings. We were happy to see this result in many really interesting talks and discussions in the course of the workshop. Of course, these lively and direct discussions are almost impossible to achieve in a printed text. Still, we asked the authors to distill the essence of these discussions into full papers. The results are in your hands.

Today's networks are evolving rapidly, and there are several developing areas and applications. These include heterogeneous networking supported by recent technological advances in power wireless communications, along with silicon integration of various functionalities such as sensing, communications, intelligence and actuations, which is emerging as a critically important disruptive computer class based on a new platform, networking structure and interface that enables novel, low-cost and high-volume applications. This ebook presents the latest research findings, as well as theoretical and practical perspectives on the innovative methods and development techniques related to the emerging areas of information networking and applications

There are a large range of other applications under development or being proposed. The underlying architectures share features such as decentralization, sharing of end system resources, autonomy, virtualization, and self-organization. These features constitute the P2P paradigm.
