Psychological and Social Control through Net Monitoring: Knowing More about Social Media Addiction and Infringement of Privacy Rights through the Net Dueep Jyot Singh,John Davidson,2018-04-01 Table of Contents Introduction Computer Access through Downloads The Social Media Addiction The Danger of Search Engines like Google and All Its Based Services, Including Google Apps and Google Play Monitoring through Apps The Danger of Google Docs Monitoring through Smart Phone and Cell Phones Obsessive Control over What You Should or Should Not Watch Knowing More about Net Neutrality Conclusion Limited or no access to sites Author Bio Publisher Introduction This book is for all of those people, who are slowly and steadily getting an inkling about the invidious ways in which the net is being used to do social control, psychological warfare, through illegal net monitoring. Also, it is going to talk about one of the direst problems being faced by millennials and youngsters today, a total addiction to the net, cell phones, smart phones, iPads, computers, desktops, laptops, and any other system which connects you on to the Internet. Not only is this a very dangerous social trend, but it is also going to affect you psychologically, emotionally, physically and mentally. But nobody thinks of these long-term effects because they are so busy browsing on the Internet and believing everything that they read on it. Also, I want to tell you about a more disturbing trend which is being practiced by governments and agencies upon a number of countries all over the earth, including America. That is, that they intend to monitor the sites that you see, decide which sites are all right for public viewing, which sites, according to the government are definitely not suitable for public viewing because they may tell some home truths about what the administration is up to, and such tactics, which put your society on a war holding an emergency status, especially when the government is monitoring everything you do. You may not know it and believe it, but if you have a Gmail address, the government of your country is already monitoring your location. And if you want to know the reason why, there is absolutely no justified reason or proper reason they can give unless of course they want to burble something about national security. Think of the wider picture, in psychological terms. You are under close monitoring CCTV with every single action that you do going without your knowledge to some computer somewhere where it does here is being made upon you. All through your net, your social site links, your tweets, your Facebook account, your Google account, the documents you have uploaded on Google, the comments you have made on sites on the Internet and so on. You may say that I am being paranoid, neurotic, schizophrenic, because I am a fully functioning sociopath like Sherlock. But then, I see further than most other people do and most other people could be bothered about thinking, because they have been taught not to think. According to them, thinking is dangerous, because any sort of initiative, creativity, imagination, wondering why this is being done has been punished out of them, since childhood. And they are living in democratic countries. These are the countries which are supplying their children with drugs so that they do not become rebels when they grow up as teenagers. No wonder with such a paranoid attitude on the part of the administration and the government, is it a wonder that people all over the world are beginning to wonder about this addiction to the social media, and how it can influence you psychologically and emotionally as well as physically and mentally.

Mobile Methods Monika Büscher,John Urry,Katian Witchger,2010-09-13 In the twenty-first century, more than ever, everything and everybody seems to be on the move. Global flows of people, goods, food, money, information, services and media images are forming an intensely mobile background to everyday life. Social scientists, too, are on the move, seeking new analytical purchase on these important aspects of the social world by trying to move with, and to be moved by, the fleeting, distributed, multiple, non-causal, sensory, emotional and kinaesthetic. Mobile Methods addresses the challenges and opportunities of researching mobile phenomena. Drawing on extensive interdisciplinary discussion, the book brings together a collection of cutting-edge methodological innovations and original research reports to examine some important implications of the mobilities turn for the processes of 'research', and the realm of the empirical. Through analysis that addresses questions such as 'how are social relationships and social institutions made in and through mobility?', and 'how do people experience mobility in twenty-first century world cities?', the authors mobilize sociological analysis, bringing new insights and opening up new opportunities for engagement with contemporary challenges. Open Development Matthew L. Smith,Katherine M. A. Reilly,2013 Experts explore current theory and practice in the application of digitally enabled open networked social models to international development. The emergence of open networked models made possible by digital technology has the potential to transform international development. Open network structures allow people to come together to share information, organize, and collaborate. Open development harnesses this power, to create new organizational forms and improve people's lives; it is not only an agenda for research and practice but also a statement about how to approach international development. In this volume, experts explore a variety of applications of openness, addressing challenges as well as opportunities.Open development requires new theoretical tools that focus on real world problems, consider a variety of solutions, and recognize the complexity of local contexts. After exploring the new theoretical terrain, the book describes a range of cases in which open models address such specific development issues as biotechnology research, improving education, and access to scholarly publications. Contributors then examine tensions between open models and existing structures, including struggles over privacy, intellectual property, and implementation. Finally, contributors offer broader conceptual perspectives, considering processes of social construction, knowledge management, and the role of individual intent in the development and outcomes of social models. Global Social Media Design Huatong Sun,2020-01-02 Social media users fracture into tribes, but social media ecosystems are globally interconnected technically, socially, culturally, and economically. At the crossroads, Huatong Sun, author of Cross-Cultural Technology Design, presents theory, method, and case studies to uncover the global interconnectedness of social media design and reorient universal design standards. Centering on the dynamics between structure and agency, Sun draws on practice theories and transnational fieldwork and articulates a critical design approach. The CLUE2 (CLUE squared) framework extends from situated activity to social practice, and connects macro institutions with micro interactions to redress asymmetrical relations in everyday life. Why were Japanese users not crazed about Facebook? Would Twitter have had been more successful than its copycat Weibo in China if not banned? How did mobilities and value propositions play out in the competition of WhatsApp, WeChat, LINE, and KakaoTalk for global growth? Illustrating the cultural entanglement with a relational view of design, Sun provides three provocative accounts of cross-cultural social media design and use. Concepts such as affordance, genre, and uptake are demonstrated as design tools to bind the material with the discursive and leap from the critical to the generative for culturally sustaining design. Sun calls to reshape the crossroads into a design square where differences are nourished as design resources, where diverse discourses interact for innovation, and where alternative design epistemes thrive from the local. This timely book will appeal to researchers, students, and practitioners who design across disciplines, paradigms, and boundaries to bridge differences in this increasingly globalized world.
