The Ad Agency Playbook Dan Henry,2017-10 Starting a marketing agency is simply a matter of charging a business a fee to get them more customers. In today's world, the easiest way to get more customers is through paid traffic on social media. Newspaper, TV and Radio are the past...paid ads on social media are the future. If you want to land easy ad clients that pay month after month like clockwork, that don't make you pull your hair out, this book will help you do just that. The perfect client is easy to land, willing to pay, requires little to no maintenance and is easy to get results for without having to be a marketing guru. In The Ad Agency Playbook, Dan Henry shares step-by-step how to find these perfect clients, help them, and create a long-lasting business doing so. You'll learn: How to find no brainer clients that not only PAY, but are super easy to get results for...even if you've never ran an ad How to land your FIRST client within hours (some people land one before they even finish reading the book ) How to pick the right client so you can get easy results and NOT ruin your reputation... Why starting an Ad Agency is a great way to quickly build a passive income...or raise capital FAST for a large purchase or investment... Most importantly, how to SCALE this to multiple clients quickly and create a full-time living... If you want to create an impressive income super fast by running paid ads for easy clients that pay...this book is for you.

Where the Suckers Moon Randall Rothenberg, 1995-10-31 For all the right reasons. Cars that can. What to Drive. The perfect Car for an Imperfect World. Only one of these slogans would be chosen by Subaru of America to sell its cars in the recession year of 1991. As six advertising agencies scrambled for the account and the winner tried to churn out the Big Idea that would install Subaru in the collective national unconscious, Randall Rothenberg was there, observing every nuance of the chaos, comedy, creativity, and egotism that made up an ad campaign. One can read Rothenberg's book as the behind-the-scenes chronicle of the brief and very troubled marriage between a beleaguered automobile company and Wieden & Kennedy, an aggressively hip ad agency whose creative director despised cars. One can read it as a history of advertising's journey from the conventionally upbeat slogan Helps Build Strong Bodies 12 Ways to the supercool nineties minimalism of Bo Knows. Either way, Where the Suckers Moon is a face-paced, insightful, and occasionally appalling look at an industry whose obsession with image has affected our entire culture.

Casting for Big Ideas Andrew Jaffe, 2003-06-26 In Casting for Big Ideas, Andrew Jaffe, industry veteran and Director of the Clio Awards, details important lessons on the management and growth of advertising agencies. He shows how the forty-year-old agency business model is breaking down because the work is becoming marginalized, as clients cut back ad budgets and hire outside marketing services and strategy firms. If agencies are to survive, Jaffe says, they must become idea-focused again and, instead of just making ads, master the art of devising the kind of non-advertising-type promotions that more quickly move a brand into the culture. Based on his long experience in the advertising industry, Jaffe offers practical advice and important lessons for agency heads who want their businesses to stand the test of time. This one-of-a-kind resource covers a subject often ignored—the business side of running an ad agency. Andrew Jaffe (New Canaan, CT) is the founding Publishing Director of Wiley's Adweek and Brandweek books imprints. He is also the Executive Director of the Clio Awards, one of the largest and most famous advertising awards programs in the world, with over 18,000 pieces submitted from agencies and production facilities in fifty-nine countries.

Advertising Agency Management Jay McNamara, 1990

Great Clients David Ullman, 2020-04-14 It's no secret that most advertising is silly, irritating, and boring. Everywhere we go, irrelevant ad-noise clutters our physical and mental environments. More importantly, it simply doesn't work. If your company's advertising doesn't rise above the fray, you probably blame your agency—they're not giving you their best work, or they "just don't get it." But consider this: you might be the problem. After nearly five decades in the advertising business, David Ullman has learned a few things about how to make effective ads. Forget the Mad Men image of a lone creative generating brilliant insights. David was on Madison Avenue in the '60s and '70s—that's not how it worked then, and it doesn't work that way now. Great advertising comes from great relationships. It comes from clear communication, shared goals, and trust. And all of those start with great clients. The tips and insights in this book show exactly how to work with your agency to ensure the work they produce is the best it can be. It's simple—learn how to be a great client, and you'll get great advertising.

Agency Daniel G. Pollick, 2000-12 A young advertising executive finds intrigue, conflict, seduction and romance as he fights to save a client account that means survival to his agency. An intriguing look at the real world of advertising, written by a former senior agency executive who saw it all.

How to Build a Small Advertising Agency and Run it at a Profit Len Gross, John Thompson Stirling, 1984

Advertising Revolutionary Jason P. Chambers, 2024-02-06 The ad exec who revolutionized the image of Black Americans in advertising Over a forty-year career, Chicagoan Tom Burrell changed the face of advertising and revolutionized the industry's approach to African Americans as human beings and consumers. Jason P. Chambers offers a biography of the groundbreaking creator and entrepreneur that explores Burrell's role in building brands like McDonald's and Coca-Cola within a deeply felt vision of folding positive images of Black people into mainstream American life. While detailing Burrell's successes, Chambers tells a parallel story of what Burrell tried to do that sheds light on the motivations of advertising creators who viewed their work as being about more than just selling. Chambers also highlights how Burrell used his entrepreneurial gifts to build an agency that opened the door for Black artists, copywriters, directors, and other professionals to earn livings, build careers, and become leaders within the industry. Compelling and multidimensional, Advertising Revolutionary combines archival research and interviews with Burrell and his colleagues to provide a long overdue portrait of an advertising industry legend and his times.

Working With Agencies Michael Sims, 2005-09-27 The client/agency relationship is an area fraught with potential problems. Competition in the field has now augmented the necessity to understand the working relationship far more thoroughly to help the client to get better value from the agency. The demand has moved from the need for client satisfaction to the need for excellence when it comes to agency performance. Only by having a good relationship can a client get the best advertising (and the same applies to both sides of the equation). A good relationship rests on a raft of elements, all of which are covered in this book.

Careers with an Advertising Agency Laura Storms, 1984 Describes fifteen career possibilities in an advertising agency including such jobs as account executive, art director, office manager, media buyer, and copywriter.
