The Legend of Arkatak Khedidja Ouheb, Mike Zyzs Merzoug, 2013-08 This is a Legend of North Africa during the time of yore, simply known as The Legend of Arkatak. In The Legend of Arkatak, the protagonist is Arkatak, a handicapped, half prince, half beggar, who goes through many obstacles in life as he grows up to become the strongest man in the world and through these hard obstacles he eventually becomes an immortal. Prince Arkatak was born handicapped from a woman that was a beggar at day and a demon at night. His father was a king that eventually died too soon before Arkatak could grow up. Hated by his paternal royal family, Arkatak quickly finds himself on the streets with his mother in a very desperate situation. They both go through many heartaches, problems and financial difficulties. Although Arkatak goes through the hardest moments in his life, it is within these hardest moments that he finds his true inner strength and eventually shines. Through multiple stages, trials, tribulations, one harder than the other one, he transforms himself to become one of the strongest forces ever to exist in the universe. The legend of Arkatak is a book that will give its readers hope and strength, showing them that amid the worst scenarios life can bring, and out of utter chaos, can come out success and the potential for a better life. There is a lot to like about The Legend of Arkatak as it has a majestic sweep and it reflects the careful thought put into the story. Some have described this book as a feel of a fully formed myth, and in some ways reminded them of Gabriel Garcia Marquez combined with early Tolkien's Silmarillion.
