BYU's Greatest Quarterbacks Jon Oliver,2021-07-30 Few NCAA Division I college football programs have the established history and legacy at the quarterback position to match that of Brigham Young University (BYU). From Steve Young (1980s) to Steve Sarkisian (1990s) to Taysom Hill (2010s) to Zach Wilson (2020), the program's list of past quarterbacks who starred at the position is remarkable. Seven Cougar quarterbacks have been the recipient of the prestigious Sammy Baugh Trophy, awarded annually to the nation's top passer, the most of any NCAA Football Bowl Subdivision program. In addition, over the past 30 years BYU has had five quarterbacks enshrined in the College Football Hall of Fame - Gifford Nielsen, Marc Wilson, Jim McMahon, Steve Young, and Ty Detmer - the most of any NCAA Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) program since 1990 and second all-time to the University of Notre Dame's nine enshrined quarterbacks. In the following chapters some of the most memorable moments from the careers of BYU's greatest quarterbacks during the modern era of the Cougar football program (1960-2020) are highlighted. In addition, the author attempts to address the interminable question of Who is BYU's Greatest Quarterback? through a quantitative analysis of pre-weighted team and individual accomplishments during the tenure of each quarterback. The results support the nomination of four candidates to be honored on a BYU Football Mount Rushmore of Quarterbacks. Appendices are provided that summarize the career statistics of all quarterbacks along with records of the fourteen BYU head football coaches to date. Cougar fans will enjoy a detailed stroll down BYU football memory lane as they reminisce about the many unforgettable players, coaches, and moments that have contributed to the rich history of the football program.

Tales from the BYU Sidelines Brad Rock,2003-01 For over two decades, Brigham Young University was the dominant football team in the Western Athletic Conference and one of the best in the western United States. The Cougars' innovative passing game made them a feared and fabled opponent. Originally an unheralded private college, hard against the slopes of the Wasatch Mountains, BYU was best known for its high-scoring basketball program. That was before LaVell Edwards arrived. Along the way, legends arose. Some were remarkable players, noted for their ability to perform in difficult circumstances. Others were known more for their locker-room pranks and off-field idiosyncrasies. Tales from the BYU Sidelines unveils the characters behind the helmets, as well as the details behind the big plays. It also chronicles some of the legendary stories surrounding the program. Like the time Edwards drove to Idaho Falls, Idaho for a speaking engagement, only to find he was 163 miles off the mark. And the day Jim McMahon -- Mad Mac himself -- swung from the balcony of a high-rise hotel in Honolulu, right into the room of his favorite wide receiver. There's something comical about the image of assistant coach Roger The Creature French, lying flat on his stomach during a game, hoping to get a better look at the first-down yardage. Steve Young's bowl game-winning pass reception looked brilliant. But it made Edwards cringe. Big lab test coming up for a couple of players? No problem. Just bring a shark cadaver along on the plane. It happened. Here, then, are the adventures of the great and the not-so-great, the colorful and the clownish, the champions and the chumps, detailed by award-winning Salt Lake sports columnist Brad Rock. Some say you just had to be there to appreciate the moment. In a sense, now you can say you have been. Book jacket.
