Arterial and Venous Access in the Cardiac Catheterization Lab Mazen Abu-Fadel, 2016-06-28 Percutaneous cardiac and endovascular procedures are performed by a variety of interventional physicians and continue to evolve and expand. One of the most important steps in performing these procedures is vascular access and their Achilles heel is vascular access site complications. This volume is intended to help the clinician by providing a practical overview of the techniques and technologies used in top catheterization laboratories to access the arterial and venous beds. Dr. Mazen Abu-Fadel and his contributors, part of the renowned cardiovascular team at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, carefully walk the reader through the various techniques used to obtain vascular access into most arterial and venous sites. They thoroughly describe current data, techniques, advantages, risks, and benefits of each vascular access site. Covering everything from anatomic landmarks to closures devices, Arterial and Venous Access in the Cardiac Catheterization Lab offers a complete overview of each procedure. In addition, it provides an up-to-date guide to the best medical technologies and equipment used when performing these procedures. Arterial and Venous Access in the Cardiac Catheterization Lab is an invaluable resource for a wide range of clinical personnel, from attending physicians and trainees to nursing staff and vascular technicians. Written by experienced leaders in the field, it demonstrates how to perform complex, risky procedures while providing patients with expert care.

Percutaneous Intervention for Coronary Chronic Total Occlusion Stéphane Rinfret, 2015-09-25 A practical and technical handbook providing operators with a step-by-step description of how to perform some of the techniques involved in the procedures, and how to troubleshoot some of the problems along the way. Examples with pictures will be provided, along with live angiographies. At the end of each chapter, the author will be provided with 3 questions to answer. Those questions will be developed by the editor and the contributors. The idea is to provide a quick reference to the most current problems encountered with a specific issue developed in the chapter. Nowadays, the busy clinician is unlikely to exclusively rely on lengthy textbooks to learn specific complex techniques. That is one of the reasons for the popularity of CTO courses, live demonstrations, and conferences and, there are consequently many courses offered around the world to help new operators in the field. CTO PCI has emerged as a very effective procedure to help patients with CTOs, with very high success and low complications rates. It is however a very challenging procedure with multiple pitfalls along the way to success, both in specific cases, but also in the learning process. There are currently no single reference or one-stop shop for the operator who wants to learn a given technique that he or she may have seen performed live in a dedicated proctorship event, or in a live demonstration, or to even troubleshoot a problem encountered in daily CTO PCI practice. This will be the first handbook formatted for the busy interventional cardiologist. This book will become a “must have” for operators who are practicing CTO PCI and who want a quick reference. However, it will also provide tips and tricks currently used in the field.

Approaches for Extending Insulin Catheter Longevity Julia Ann King, 2022 Implantable medical devices serve a wide range of therapeutic purposes; however, they are an alien material in the body and are subject to the effects of the body's immune reaction—the foreign body response (FBR). For insulin catheters, a foreign body capsule occludes the catheter tip within 2-3 days, thereby eliminating any therapeutic effects. Here, a few approaches are proposed to reduce the extent of the FBR to lengthen the medical device lifetime and lessen the disease management burden. The first approach is to minimize initial protein adsorption on the device—a traditional method of improving biocompatibility. In this work, a nonfouling zwitterionic polymer, poly(sulfobetaine methacrylate) (pSBMA), was grafted to the surface as a polymer brush coating using an alternative polymerization initiator—a plasma-deposited bromoester. The plasma-deposited initiator robustly covers the entirety of the surface independently of device material or shape. To further-optimize these polymer brush coatings, the effects of polymer brush length and density were investigated utilizing self-assembled monolayers. Quartz crystal microbalance with dissipation was used to measure protein adsorption after in situ polymerization and sum frequency generation spectroscopy measured water structure at the interface. In a second approach to reduce the FBR, macrophages will be guided to an alternative, 'pro-healing', phenotype—M2. A de novo version of interleukin-4 (IL-4) was computationally designed with high stability, binding affinity, and an additional cysteine residue. In this work, an SN2 reaction was used to substitute the cysteine on a brominated surface, immobilizing the therapeutic. The reaction was confirmed by immobilizing cysteine-containing cell adhesion RGD peptides and culturing with fibroblasts to confirm bioactivity maintenance in preparation for the de novo IL-4. Finally, with the proposed increase in device lifetime there is an elevated infection risk. Therefore, a method for antibiotic incorporation was developed for the insulin catheter. The extended release of the drug was measured over time and a concentration model was developed to predict the antibiotic concentration around the catheter to ensure minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) was maintained. The approaches investigated here may significantly reduce the effects of the FBR, aiming to extend insulin catheter longevity or other implantable medical devices.

Manual of Vascular Access, Organ Donation, and Transplantation R.L. Simmons,A.J. Henriksen,M.E. Finch,N.L. Ascher,J.S. Najarian,2012-12-06 This book is a compilation of common and uncommon surgical and ancillary techniques that we have found useful in the multiorgan transplantation program at the University of Minnesota. Descriptions of these techniques are not available at a single source elsewhere. Use the book as a teaching aid, a source of workable techniques, and as a reference for individuals with relatively little experience in a particular area of transplantation. Because of the varying levels of expertise of our readers, vascular access is described in exquisite detail, as it is aimed at an audience of individuals who want to learn the fine points about how to prolong the function of shunts. The chapter on organ preservation is aimed at the surgeon or beginning technician who must learn how to do it from scratch—even the catalogue numbers of the necessary equipment are included. In contrast the chapters on heart, liver, and pancreas transplantation, while omitting fine points of suture technique, concentrate on the essential principles and safeguards. Individuals contemplating such transplants are presumably already schooled in the fine points of surgical technique. The chapters on cadaver organ donation are perhaps the most innovative. They represent our attempt to reorganize organ donation in a way that will provide the greatest usefulness of each donor as a source for multiple organs for transplantation. We hope that the book will become available to centers that, while not performing liver, pancreas, or heart transplants, wish to serve as donation centers.
