Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System (CENTRIXS): Supporting Coalition Warfare World-Wide ,2004 The joint Combatant Commanders require responsive information exchange between combined forces and the joint combatant commands region-to-region for global operations. CENTRIXS (Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System) is the premier network for coalition interoperability in support of military operations. Ongoing coalition operations continue to test and prove the viability of the CENTRIXS enterprise. Information flow to coalition partners via the multiple versions of CENTRIXS networks achieved unprecedented volume and continues to expand. CENTRIXS dissemination capabilities must become even more robust as the trend to move more command and control operations to the coalition networks continues. CENTRIXS is designed to one day form a single, common, global, multinational data network. To achieve this goal, a certified security technology solution to allow confidential, multi-level information sharing over a single network is desperately needed. The only option today is proliferation of multiple separate networks to support the various coalition operations and bilateral exchanges. Security technology to allow separate, simultaneous communities of interest across common network transport is key to future coalition networking.

Coalition Operations with the Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System (CENTRIXS). ,2004 This paper discusses the continued development and operation of coalition networks in support of U.S. Pacific Command's initiative to provide classified, permanent network service for bilateral and multilateral communities of interest for combined and coalition operations. The Combined Operations Wide Area Networks (COWAN) project, headed by SSC San Diego personnel, continued to grow and has recently been consolidated with the Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System (CENTRIXS) program, originally designed to support U.S. Central Command requirements. The consolidation of these efforts has created a dynamic team of personnel working to meet the increasing need for secure global connectivity. Challenges continue to confront the team, primarily in getting approved and accredited technical solutions for connecting multiple classified domains to facilitate the Global War on Terrorism.

The Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System - the Way Ahead ,2007 The Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System (CENTRIXS) is a coordinated Department of Defense Program established at the request of the Combatant Commands (COCOMs) to support the Global War on Terrorism (GWOT). CENTRIXS is a standing, global enterprise network allowing U.S. and coalition nations and their forces, in a seamless manner, to securely share operational and intelligence information in support of combined planning, a unity of effort, and decision making in multinational operations. This thesis describes CENTRIXS networks that support the needs of the COCOMs on a global basis. The document also addresses who is connected to whom, what kinds of information must be passed from one user to another, and the services provided to the users of CENTRIXS networks. We conduct a Knowledge Value Added analysis to streamline the manning and usability of CENTRIXS nodes. We also explore how to efficiently and effectively go through the process of acquisition, installation, and accreditation of a CENTRIXS node.

Maritime Security Partnerships National Research Council,Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Naval Studies Board,Committee on the "1,000-Ship Navy" - A Distributed and Global Maritime Network,2009-01-16 To offer security in the maritime domain, governments around the world need the capabilities to directly confront common threats like piracy, drug-trafficking, and illegal immigration. No single navy or nation can do this alone. Recognizing this new international security landscape, the former Chief of Naval Operations called for a collaborative international approach to maritime security, initially branded the 1,000-ship Navy. This concept envisions U.S. naval forces partnering with multinational, federal, state, local and private sector entities to ensure freedom of navigation, the flow of commerce, and the protection of ocean resources. This new book from the National Research Council examines the technical and operational implications of the 1,000-ship Navy, as they apply to four levels of cooperative efforts: U.S. Navy, Coast Guard, and merchant shipping only; U.S. naval and maritime assets with others in treaty alliances or analogous arrangements; U.S. naval and maritime assets with ad hoc coalitions; and U.S. naval and maritime assets with others than above who may now be friendly but could potentially be hostile, for special purposes such as deterrence of piracy or other criminal activity.

Networked Operations and Transformation Allan English,Richard Gimblett,Howard Coombs,2014-06-22 The authors consider various approaches to networked operations that are based on the physical environment and cultural context in which armed forces operate. They conclude that a one size fits all approach to command and control for networked operations may not be the most effective and suggest a more human-centric approach than the primarily technology-centred model used by the U.S. military.

Network Centric Warfare and Coalition Operations Paul T. Mitchell,2009-02-05 This book argues that Network Centric Warfare (NCW) influences how developed militaries operate in the same fashion that an operating system influences the development of computer software. It examines three inter-related issues: the overwhelming military power of the United States; the growing influence of NCW on military thinking; and the centrality of coalition operations in modern military endeavours. Irrespective of terrorist threats and local insurgencies, the present international structure is remarkably stable - none of the major powers seeks to alter the system from its present liberal character, as demonstrated by the lack of a military response to US military primacy. This primacy privileges the American military doctrine and thus the importance of NCW, which promises a future of rapid, precise, and highly efficient operations, but also a future predicated on the 'digitization' of the battle space. Participation in future American-led military endeavours will require coalition partners to be networked: 'interoperability' will therefore be a key consideration of a partner's strategic worth. Network Centric Warfare and Coalition Operations will be of great interest to students of strategic studies, international security, US foreign policy and international relations in general.

Network Centric Warfare Paul T. Mitchell,2013-03-07 Since its emergence in 1998, the concept of Network Centric Warfare (NCW) has become a central driver behind America's military 'transformation' and seems to offer the possibility of true integration between multinational military formations. Even though NCW, or variations on its themes, has been adopted by most armed services, it is a concept in operational and doctrinal development. It is shaping not only how militaries operate, but, just as importantly, what they are operating with, and potentially altering the strategic landscape. This paper examines how the current military dominance of the US over every other state means that only it has the capacity to sustain military activity on a global scale and that other states participating in US-led coalitions must be prepared to work in an 'interoperable' fashion. It explores the application of computer networks to military operations in conjunction with the need to secure a network's information and to assure that it accurately represents situational reality. Drawing on an examination of how networks affected naval operations in the Persian Gulf during 2002 and 2003 as conducted by America's Australian and Canadian coalition partners, the paper warns that in seeking allies with the requisite technological capabilities, but also those that it can trust with its information resources, the US may be heading towards a very secure digital trap.

Interoperability Senior Steering Group Efforts to Build a Global Data Network for Joint Coalition Warfighting ,2002 Joint warfighting operations demand responsive information exchange across combined forces and unified commands for planning, unity of effort, decision superiority, and decisive global operations. In a concerted endeavor with the other warfighting theater commands, and supported by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense/Command, Control, Computers, and Intelligence and the National Security Agency, U.S. Central Command is fielding a global multinational information sharing network called Combined Enterprise Regional Information Exchange System (CENTRIXS). CENTRIXS is web-centric and uses commercial-off-the-shelf equipment. Implementation is focused on fielding core information services first: e-mail with attachments, web-browser-based data access, and file sharing (e.g., office documents, txt, pdf, image files). Other required services, including collaboration and near-real time data access, are enabled as the network matures. To the extent possible, CENTRIXS will subsume and consolidate existing stove-piped coalition networks as part of a single, unified system. Over 32 coalition nations are now operating on CENTRIXS globally. Gateways are operational at USCENTCOM Navy, Army, and Air Force component task forces and five deployed force sites, including three for Special Operations. The initial USEUCOM gateway is operational and the USPACOM gateway is in progress.

A Transformation Gap? Theo Farrell,Terriff Terry,Osinga Frans,2010-04-07 NATO member states are all undergoing some form of military transformation. Despite a shared vision, transformation has been primarily a US-led process centered on the exploitation of new information technologies in combination with new concepts for networked organizations and effects-based operations. Simply put, European states have been unable to match the level of US investment in new military technologies, leading to the identification of a growing transformation gap between the US and the European allies. This book assesses the extent and trajectory of military transformation across a range of European NATO member states, setting their transformation progress against that of the US, and examining the complex mix of factors driving military transformation in each country. It reveals not only the nature and extent of the transatlantic gap, but also identifies an enormous variation in the extent and pace of transformation among the European allies, suggesting both technological and operational gaps within Europe.

Corporal Cannon Savannah Cannon,2022-09-16 "...a dramatic, sobering account of prejudice and the mistreatment of women in combat zones. - Publishers Weekly Not even old enough to drink, Corporal Savannah Cannon is a young enlisted United States Marine deployed to support Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan in 2010. As a tactical data networking specialist, she is sent away from everyone she knows and attached to a Regimental Combat Team where women are not allowed to repair communications. Her experiences over the next few months shed light on the unique and difficult positions women are placed in when supporting combat roles, while offering a raw look at the painful choices women must sometimes make. Cannon finds herself in a combat zone, ostracized from family, friends, and even her fellow Marines as the men are told to avoid her. The connections she makes are born from trauma and desperation and the choices she makes will echo throughout many lives. Corporal Cannon is not the story of a heroine; it is the hard-hitting account of just one of the flawed individuals who make up the United States' fighting forces. Mistakes in the battlefield can have dire consequences, personally and professionally. Reflecting on her time in service, the author weaves a story of past and present, and the healing that can come with admitting our mistakes and moving past them.
