The EFT Coach Mary L R Jones,2020-06-15 Imagine being able to dissolve your clients' fears and blast through their blocks to action, in minutes instead of hours or weeks. The EFT Coach was the first ever manual for professional coaches and EFT practitioners. Now in its 4th Edition, it carefully works through the ethics and principles of using EFT as a coaching tool, and then presents a comprehensive guide to the many ways of using EFT to assist the coaching process, including ten new variations of EFT designed specifically for coaching issues. Learn how to use EFT to: Validate client goals Test client values and resolve value conflicts Clear blocks to action Remove limiting beliefs Ditch unwanted habits Reduce fear of change Written by a qualified Life Coach and EFT practitioner, The EFT Coach shows how EFT can enhance many standard coaching tools such as peak experiences, visualisations, inquiries, metaphor work, structures and homework. It also contains ten specially developed variations of EFT, designed specifically to help with coaching situations, including: The Doing and Being Pattern – A lot of coaching involves getting the client to focus on their way of being as much as the actions they are taking to achieve their goals, but these can often seem like separate or conflicting things. The Being and Doing Pattern brings both aspects together, helping to integrate the client's actions with their new way of being. The Celebration Pattern – If you ever had a client who found it hard to enjoy their own achievement or to even really acknowledge it at all, this pattern can help connect clients with their own success. The Yes/No Commitment Pattern – Successful commitment often involves releasing an old behaviour in order to commit to something new. The Yes/No commitment pattern addresses this problem directly, making it easier for your client to commit and stay committed. The Both of Us Pattern – Clients often anticipate the reactions of others before they make life changes, perhaps making other people a reason not to change at all. The Both of Us pattern offers a way to release these blocks to change, while fully accepting the presence and needs of others involved. The Non-Judgement Pattern – A key element of coaching is to avoid any judgement about what the client thinks or says. The Non-Judgement pattern allows EFT to be used in a way which makes no judgement about whether the issue being looked at is even a problem. It allows exploration of insights around goals, values and beliefs, without making any assumptions about the outcome. The Universal Belief Antidote Pattern – This pattern offers a way of dealing with ANY belief that has been identified as being an obstacle to a goal, but without having to delve into the source of the belief itself. Its purpose is to help the client discover new possibilities for a solution despite the belief. The Today-Is-A-New-Day Procedure – An easy-to-use, 10-minute unsticking exercise, suitable for clients with basic EFT knowledge. Ideal homework! The EFT Coach is a brilliant and marvelously presented manual for combining two of the most powerful and effective tools for change, transformation and success – coaching and EFT. It is clear, detailed, practical and truly inspirational. Milena Galbraith, MA, LMHC, Aurora Holistic Also by this author: The EFT Coach Workbook for Complete Beginners

Navigating the Rapids and the Waves of Life Mavis Mazhura,2014-08-28 Our emotions influence our responses and subsequent reactions to change or to life's experiences. For a lot of us, our formal and informal education systems did not provide the skills to navigate the changes and challenges we encounter in life. The good thing, though, is that we can still learn it along the way, at whatever stage we are in life. I experienced this kind of learning on the Nile River-rafting without prior knowledge but with willingness to learn, change the status quo, practice, become better, and be flexible enough to let adventure in. I was a mediocre paddler, and I didn't know how to swim-but I was willing to learn. It is out of that adventure that I am able to reflect on the metaphor of a river as our daily life. The key lessons I took from the river raft that I have seen as key in learning and applying emotional intelligence in our lives for overall success are: Know your course. Stay present. Don't give power to external conditions. Adapt purposely. Have some tools and options. Team with people who are creating the results that you want. Don't flow back on yourself: Get out of obstructions as soon as possible-your whole life still awaits you! Recharge. Flow on purpose and live. Celebrate the unsung hero inside you.
