Exploring the Northwest Territory Alexander Mackenzie,1966 First publication of manuscript in the British Museum and comparison with Mackenzie's published account of 1801; editor himself canoed down the Mackenzie River in 1965.

Explore the Northwest Territories! Rebecca Sjonger,2018 Get ready to explore Canada like never before-from coast to coast to coast. This highly visual series takes readers on a road trip across the Canadian provinces and territories. Visit major cities, and head off the beaten path to explore the people, environment, foods, cultures, and history of each region. Detours add fun trivia and jokes to the road trip, while maps show the route travelled.

Thirty Years in the Arctic Regions Sir John Franklin,2017-11-21 In an age when polar exploration was akin to space exploration today, Sir John Franklin's journeys of discovery captured the popular imagination. Originally published in 1859, Thirty Years in the Arctic Regions is Franklin's own record of his two overland expeditions, begun in 1816 and 1825, which took him to what is now the Northwest Territory of Canada. But it was Franklin's final expedition, to discover the sea route connecting the northern Atlantic and Pacific oceans, that cemented his place in the history of Arctic exploration. Franklin and his crew set out in two ships, the Erebus and the Terror. Their search for the Northwest Passage was doomed, and the fate of Franklin and his 129-man crew remained a mystery for many years, despite the fact that more than thirty missions were sent to look for survivors or remains. The bodies of several of its members were eventually found. By 2016, both ships had been discovered, bringing an end to a 168-year-old Arctic mystery. This book includes Franklin's record of the hardship and suffering his men endured from his earlier expeditions, during which he and his crew charted 1,700 miles of Arctic coastline. Also, it includes Franklin's detailed descriptions of a region that in the 19th century must have seemed as alien as a lunar landscape. The book's final entries include a letter from Franklin dated July 12, 1845—the last communication from the expedition received in England—and letters sent by the leaders of subsequent search expeditions. Thirty Years in the Arctic Regions describes an era when British exploration of the Far North was at its peak, in the words of one of its most prominent and ill-fated explorers.

True North William Robert Morrison,1998 The Canadian North has been many things to many people. For some it is a frontier, while for others - particularly the indigenous people - it has always been a homeland. Through text and a wealth of illustrations, this book explores the history of the land and people of this least-known part of Canada.

The Big Book of Canada (Updated Edition) Christopher Moore,2017 A gorgeous gift book, reference book, and just plain fun-to-read book--updated for Canada's Sesquicentennial. From Nunavut's Barren Lands to the Torngat Mountains of Newfoundland, from Quebec's Saguenay Fjord to the pingos of the Northwest Territories, The Big Book of Canada explores the many fascinating places that make up this vast land. Christopher Moore, one of the country's foremost historians, brings each province and territory to life, drawing together history and politics, the famous and the infamous, the people, places and industries that have defined a nation. The book is lavishly illustrated with more than 140 photographs and 110 original pieces by award-winning artist Bill Slavin.

An Exploration of the Tazin and Taltson Rivers, North West Territories (Classic Reprint) Charles Camsell,2017-10-17 Excerpt from An Exploration of the Tazin and Taltson Rivers, North West Territories This report contains an account of an exploration carried out during the Summer of 1914 in the hitherto unexplored region lying between Lake Athabaska and Great Slave lake and east of Slave river. The expedition was undertaken with the object of obtaining as much information as possible on the geography, topography, geology, and natural history of a region that had previously been visited by only one man who had left any written record of his journey. That man was Samuel Hearne, an officer of the Hudson's Bay Company, who crossed the region in company with a band of Chipewyan Indians in the winter of 1771-72 as he was returning to Fort Churchill from his voyage of exploration to the Coppermine river. The exploration carried out by the writer consisted of a single canoe traverse across the region from south to north leaving Lake Athabaska at a point a few miles west of the mouth of Charlot river and entering Great Slave lake at the mouth of the Taltson river about 40 miles east of the mouth of Slave river. Parts of the route are travelled by the Indians that live and hunt in the region, but the whole route is appar ently not known to any single individual, and there are certain parts of it that have never been travelled by any one of the present generation. As a result, it was found impossible to get any native to accompany the expedition in the capacity of guide and the route was followed with the aid only of a rough sketch drawn by an Indian, in which there were many blanks. Though a period of five and a half months elapsed from the time the party left Ottawa on May 5 until its return on October18only about 2 months of this time was actually employed in geographical and geological investigation of the field, the remainder of the time having been taken up in travel to the point of starting on Lake Athabaska, and from the point of completion of field work on Great Slave lake. Our course to the point on the north shore of Lake Athabaska where exploration actually began followed the usual boat route from Athabaska, at the end of the railway line, down the Athabaska river to its mouth and thence northeast for about 100 miles on Lake Athabaska. The return journey 'from Resolution, on Great Slave lake, was made by way of Slave river to Lake Athabaska and thence by the Athabaska river to the point of starting at Athabaska.
