Stenotype Finger Technique S. Heller,2017-08-08 This manual of finger training exercises is based on the author's experience as a stenotype reporter and teacher. These drills were developed not only for their RAPID effectiveness in overcoming finger difficulties, but also, as warm-up at a peak for actual stenotype operation. By faithfully following the instructions, the court reporter, CART reporter, and closed captioner can improve finger technique and control so that it will be possible to accomplish more in an hour's practice with a perfected technique than can otherwise be attained in two hours with a mediocre technique.

The Finger Ratio John Manning,2009 SCIENCE: GENERAL ISSUES. What could fingers and sex possibly have in common? What does the shape of a child's fingers reveal about future musical talent? And why should professional footballers have longer fingers than other men? This book is about a simple measurement of the human hand: the 'finger ratio', or the length of the ring finger relative to the index finger. John Manning uses a tiny difference between the sexes - that men tend to have a greater finger ratio than women - to examine a dizzying group of questions about human behaviour, from sexuality, to musical ability, to predisposition to disease. Provocative, intriguing and balanced, John Manning's cutting-edge research poses many fruitful and unusual questions about what makes us as we are.

Individual Differences in Finger Reactions Esther Lucilla Gatewood,1970

Reflex, Habit and Learning Suzanne Finger,University of Victoria (B.C.). Department of Curriculum and Instruction,2001 This thesis explores the way in which the primary reflexive pattern of expansion and contraction through the spine connects to habit and learning. My eighteen-year practice as an Alexander Technique teacher and extensive experience as a musician and dancer informed my study. Research into the literature about habit and reflex in the late nineteenth through the twentieth century brought to light two radically different discourses, which are contrasted here. F.M. Alexander and John Dewey both understood the interaction of habit and reflex as an opportunity for learning and the empowerment of choice. Behaviorists in experimental and educational psychology redefined habit as automaticity and focused on the external control of behaviour. The primary reflex, also known as startle pattern, is expressed in the fields of interplay both within self and between the self and the world. The continually shifting mix of habit and creativity that constructs learning and perception is accessible to conscious awareness and direction through working with this reflex. In the interactive learning process in which I participate with my students, movement becomes a dynamic, expressive process rather than either a mechanical goal-oriented function or an habitual phenomenon disengaged from the sense of self. My intention here is to invite my reader into this process by telling stories, offering analysis and historical context, and juxtaposing writing from Alexander, Dewey and others with my own text. The flow of my text moves along the right facing pages; the quotations, poetry and prose on the left may be read in conjunction with or separately from the text. I chose this form to create a depth of experiential understanding, a field in which to discover interconnections. Of course, the choice and placement of writing reflects my standpoint. The student stories are fictionalized and constructed from experiences common to many different people and therefore contain no clues as to individual identities. Because of the foundational nature of the process that I work with, a telephone line repair technician could be dealing with the same issues as might, for example, a massage therapist, fire fighter, singer, teacher or car mechanic.

Haptics: Neuroscience, Devices, Modeling, and Applications Malika Auvray,Christian Duriez,2014-10-09

The two-volume set LNCS 8618 and 8619 constitutes the refereed proceedings of the 9th International Conference EuroHaptics 2014, held in Versailles, France, in June 2014. The 118 papers (36 oral presentations and 82 poster presentations) presented were carefully reviewed and selected from 183 submissions. Furthermore, 27 demos were exhibited, each of them resulting in a short paper included in the volumes. These proceedings reflect the multidisciplinary nature of EuroHaptics and cover topics such as human-computer interaction, human-robot interactions, neuroscience, perception and psychophysics, biomechanics and motor control, modelling and simulation; and a broad range of applications in medicine, rehabilitation, art, and design.

Virtual Environments and Advanced Interface Design Woodrow Barfield,Thomas A. Furness,1995-06

Virtual Environments and Advanced Interface Design is a volume of original chapters to introduce the reader to the technology of virtual reality. The research presented in this book examines the impact of the new technology of virtual reality on the field of human factors. The first editor, Barfield, is head of the Human Factor Laboratory at the University of Washington in the USA, and he has assembled contributions from experts in key laboratories around the US to discuss their basic approaches to this new field. Some of the topics discussed are computer graphics, eye tracking, tactile and kinesthetic input, interface design, and applications in medicine and aerospace.

Eye Tracking Methodology Andrew Duchowski,2007-09-14 Despite the availability of cheap, fast, accurate and usable eye trackers, there is little information available on how to develop, implement and use these systems. This 2nd edition of the successful guide contains significant additional material on the topic and aims to fill that gap in the market by providing an accessible and comprehensive introduction.

Additional key features of the 2nd edition include: Technical description of new (state-of-the-art) eye tracking technology; a complete whole new section describing experimental methodology including experimental design, empirical guidelines, and five case studies; and survey material regarding recent research publications.

Natural Progesterone Cream C. Norman Shealy,1999-09-22 Used to treat PMS, migraines, osteoporosis, and more.

Information-Processing Channels in the Tactile Sensory System George A. Gescheider,John H.

Wright,Ronald T. Verrillo,2010-10-18 Information-Processing Channels in the Tactile Sensory System addresses the fundamental question of whether sensory channels, similar to those known to operate in vision and audition, also operate in the sense of touch. Based on the results of psychophysical and neurophysiological experimentation the authors make a powerful case that channels operate in the processing of mechanical stimulation of the highly sensitive glabrous skin of the hand. According to the multichannel model presented in this monograph, each channel, with its specific type of mechanoreceptor and afferent nerve fiber, responds optimally to particular aspects of the tactile stimulus. It is further proposed that the tactile perception of objects results from the combined activity of the individual tactile channels. This work is important because it provides researchers and students in the field of sensory neuroscience with a comprehensive model that enhances our understanding of tactile perception.

Clovis Revisited Anthony T. Boldurian, John L. Cotter, 2013-11 Explore the early days of Paleoindian archaeology in this engaging retrospective of Edgar B. Howard's Southwest Early Man Project, 1929-1937, cosponsored by the University Museum and the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. This book contains a detailed analysis of the world-famous Clovis artifacts, discovered among the bones of mammoths and extinct bison in the Dust Bowl of eastern New Mexico. Blending traditional and current ideas, the authors offer an extended reference to the lifeways of early humans in the Americas, accented by a series of unique insights on their origins and adaptations. Well appointed with photos, line illustrations, and schematics, Clovis Revisited is essential reading for professionals, students, and avocational enthusiasts.

Iowa's Archaeological Past Lynn M. Alex, 2010-09-13 Iowa has more than eighteen thousand archaeological sites, and research in the past few decades has transformed our knowledge of the state's human past. Drawing on the discoveries of many avocational and professional scientists, Lynn Alex describes Iowa's unique archaeological record as well as the challenges faced by today's researchers, armed with innovative techniques for the discovery and recovery of archaeological remains and increasingly refined frameworks for interpretation. The core of this book--which includes many historic photographs and maps as well as numerous new maps and drawings and a generous selection of color photos--explores in detail what archaeologists have learned from studying the state's material remains and their contexts. Examining the projectile points, potsherds, and patterns that make up the archaeological record, Alex describes the nature of the earliest settlements in Iowa, the development of farming cultures, the role of the environment and environmental change, geomorphology and the burial of sites, interaction among native societies, tribal affiliation of early historic groups, and the arrival and impact of Euro-Americans. In a final chapter, she examines the question of stewardship and the protection of Iowa's many archaeological resources.
