The Duty to Consult Dwight G. Newman, 2009-10-25 [W]hen precisely does a duty to consult arise? The foundation of the duty in the Crown's honour and the goal of reconciliation suggest that the duty arises when the Crown has knowledge, real or constructive, of the potential existence of the Aboriginal right or title and contemplates conduct that might adversely affect it. Chief Justice Beverley McLachlin, Supreme Court of Canada, Haida Nation v. British Columbia, 2004. Canada's Supreme Court has established a new legal framework requiring governments to consult with Aboriginal peoples when contemplating actions that may affect their rights. The nature of the duty is to be defined by negotiation, best practices, and future court decisions. According to Professor Newman, good consultations are about developing relationships and finding ways of living together in the encounter that history has thrust upon us. Professor Newman examines Supreme Court and lower court decisions, legislation at various levels, policies developed by governments and Aboriginal communities, and consultative round tables that have been held to deal with important questions regarding this duty. He succinctly examines issues such as: when is consultation required; who is to be consulted; what is the nature of a good consultation; can consultation be carried out by quasi-judicial agencies and third parties; to what extent does the duty apply in treaty areas; and what duty is owed to Métis and non-status Indians? Professor Newman also examines the evolving duty to consult in international law, similar developments in Australia, and the philosophical underpinnings of the duty.

Consult God First Lucretia Shaw, 2016-05-02 Consult God First is a spiritual guide for individuals to inspire those who desire a stable, healthy, and long-lasting relationship or marriage that will prosper and is ordained by God. In life, we as individuals jump into relationships or marriages without consulting God and then when it gets rocky we have no choice but to consult God to get us out of the situation. That's not fair to God. If you consult God first in the beginning and seek His guidance to lead you into the right relationship, you will be able to choose wisely with God's help. God will not steer any person in the wrong direction if they are doing what He instructs.
