From Chicken Feet to Crystal Baths Ian Mote, 2015-04-14 I have been to every province in China, and the book is made up of travel stories – about the places I have been and the experiences I have had. For instance, I have been hosted in first-class establishments in Shanghai, been drunk with miners in Inner Mongolia, wandered out in the Gobi desert, and nearly been sick on the embalmed body of Chairman Mao. This book is about being a Western expat adjusting to life in Asia, first in Hong Kong and then in Shanghai. It is about negotiating with local people on whether prostitutes are required after dinner, singing Chinese songs in the middle of meetings, and finding the only spot in the country without an army of tourists spoiling the photos. I wish to share travel and living stories from Hong Kong and every province in China, through the eyes of one fascinated, curious, worried, reckless, adventurous, queasy, stunned, and quite tired English expat.

China in Family Photographs Ed Krebs, Hanchao Lu, 2018 This book is a collection of translations from Old Photos, a Chinese bimonthly publication launched in 1996 that presents photographs and narratives from ordinary readers and professional historians in a manner that proclaims: this is our history, not the history those above would have us believe. The magazine was concerned with the everyday lives of ordinary people while also covering the momentous, often traumatic, political life of the People's Republic. It became clear it would also serve as a forum and archive for people's experiences and reflections about life in the People's Republic. Old Photos presented an open format where readers' contributions were published alongside that of professional writers, historians', and novelists.

Qinghai Province, China; details of photo collection; the social place of photographs within traditional socio-religious cultures; and how photographs are displayed within the home. For each photo there is commentary describing the when and where of their production and the people in each image. Biographic details include ethnicity, language abilities, family ties, educational background, garb and, at times, medical history.

A Century History of Ningbo Photo Studio (1875-1980) ,2022-12 Around 1875, the first local photo studio in more than 2000 counties in China and the Lotus Mirror photo studio in the north of Guangzhou appeared in Ningbo's Cixi County; The history of Ningbo Photo Studio of one hundred years began with this, and ended with the appearance of digital cameras around 1980. Based on the old photos of Ningbo that I have purchased and collected for more than ten years, the author has excavated various historical materials related to the photography industry of Ningbo, and compiled this book using the double evidence method. The book is divided into five chapters, 7 counties, about 135 photo studios, and more than 350 images; It is a book that studies the history of the integration of western heterogeneous culture and Ningbo local culture, introduces the methods of textual research and identification of old photos at various stages and their historical and cultural values, and also appends the auction ranking prices of old photos at home and abroad. In 2016, Tong Bingxue in Beijing compiled the first History of Chinese Photo Studio, which has not yet appeared in the history of photo studios in other provinces and cities in China. This is the second book to introduce the History of One Hundred Years of Photo Studio in Ningbo. It is a book that readers rarely appreciate and learn.

Then join David to explore the photos' details, and so discover their hidden stories: the women who toiled up the Peak's slopes each day, carrying heavy loads of bricks and coal on their shoulders, buried treasure still waiting to be found, Kowloon's vanishing hills, and many more. Photographs of Peking, China 1861-1908 Nick Pearce,2005 This book provides an addition to the small but growing body of literature on the practices of photography in China. Using a collection of a surviving nineteenth century photographs of Beijing held in the collection of the Oriental Museum, University of Durham, the author explores both the cityscape as it was recorded by two Scottish photographers and the interplay of personality and professional identities within the Foreign Legation quarter during a thirty-five year period. Three people are central to the book: the professional photographer John Thomson, the amateur photographer and missionary doctor, John Dudgeon and Stephen Bushell, physician to the British Legation, pioneer historian of Chinese art and original owner of the collection of the photographs. They provide the context and practice and provenance for the photographs and offer insight into the life of the small contingent of Westerners who resided within the walls of China's capital. here for the first time, the former revealed as an important contributor to the development of photography in China, the latter a major influence on the formation and interpretation of a number of important collections of a Chinese art in Britain and America. This book will be of interest to historians of photography, art, architecture and China during the late nineteenth century. [This] erudite study... is of interest not only to art historians, but also to historians of China and of comparative colonialisms.

Elements of China (Photo Album)(English Edition) (张其成). Laurence J. Brahm (USA), 2008 The Philosophy of China is one of natural cycles, understatement instead of overstatement, using flow rather than force, movement over stagnation, and understanding that the only thing which remains constant is change. This album displays China and Chinese philosophy according to traditional wuxing (five elements, i.e., water, wood, fire, earth, and gold) thought, which arose from the China's naturalist school over 2,000 years ago. It embodies the Chinese view of our universe which absorbs natural phenomenon as a force not to be controlled but a continuous cycle to be pursued. Embodies by this.
