Remote Control: A Practitioner's Guide to Managing Virtual Teams Stephen Troutman,2005 The world today demands a more complex and integrated model of work that entails people working together, simultaneously remote, matrixed and global--the modern virtual team. A virtual team methodology can help organizations meet this challenge. The Team Capital Model, whereby teams deposit assets that can later be withdrawn during the inevitable periods of stress during a project, is the fundamental concept that helps ensure smooth functioning, effective, and successful teams.

Recommended Practices for Remote Virtual Inspections (RVI) ,2020-05-03 Recommended Practices for Remote Virtual Inspections (RVI) is the most complete source of information on remote inspections. RVI is an alternative to on-site inspections using a video call on a 4G or WiFi telephony (smartphone, tablet, etc.) in order to interact with the inspector. It is a comprehensive tool for local jurisdictions and the building industry alike that desire to implement a remote inspection program. This publication covers the RVI process, inspection scheduling, preparation, what the owner/contractor should expect, training and communications, and recording and maintaining records. While all types of inspections may not be suitable for RVI, a list of potential construction activities suitable for remote inspections is provided. RVI also lends itself to connect seamlessly as part of an overall online program that will allow jurisdictions to provide complete services to the public utilizing the latest technology. Online permitting and electronic plan review together with remote virtual inspections can provide a complete program that keeps the construction industry moving while providing a healthy environment for all participants.

Remote Engineering Management Alexandra Sunderland,2022-08-04 Managing an engineering team is hard, managing a remote engineering team is even harder—but dedicating effort to setting up a proper remote-first environment will allow for your team to thrive. This book breaks down the most important processes in engineering teams, and demonstrates how to make them work effectively in a remote organization. How do you organize code deployments, onboard new hires, give feedback, and stay up to date with your team when you can't see each other in person every day? This book looks at how building connections and working together to solve problems comes naturally when a team is co-located, but can feel almost impossible when everyone is working remotely and communicating over video calls and messages. Whether you're an experienced engineering manager or just getting started, you'll learn why copying in-office practices to the remote office doesn't work, the communication issues behind the scenes you may not even realize are happening, and how to make every aspect of remote work better for your team. From learning about how to remove new remote-specific biases from your interview process, to understanding what the team really thinks about those daily status update meetings, this book will be your guide in creating the best and most inclusive version of your engineering team. What You'll Learn Recognize where current remote processes are falling short Build up best practices to lead a team with a people-first and empathetic approach Communicate effectively in a remote organization Who This Book is For Engineering managers, team leads, directors, and those hoping to move into a lead role, will get the most value out of the book. Many of the learnings around communication will be applicable to any position in an organization, but there's a focus on processes and job duties most relevant to engineers.
