Edward Ray

The Back Nine John Bowling,2004-12-01 In the front nine of my life, my expectations about my golf game were much too high. I tried too hard to be like the great golfers I saw on television or read about in the golf magazines. I wanted to hit the ball long and fire approach shots that landed near the pin and spun backwards into or near the hole. Instead, I had a pronounced slice and struggled to exceed 200 yards on my drives. Too many of my approach shots didn't even hit the green, let alone spin backward into the hole. I've learned as I've grown older and wiser that you don't have to be good at golf to enjoy it.

112 Miles to the Pin Duncan Lennard,2007-07 'Golf', the writer Jim Bishop once said, 'is a game played by twenty million mature American men whose wives think they are out having fun.' For so many golfers, this description of the great game is all too true. That innocent thrill of striking a drive cleanly for the first time, or holing that amazing putt, is all but a distant memory. Boggled down by getting up at some ridiculous hour to get a decent tee time, their average round is a frustrating four hours of miss hits, hooks, slices and bad putts. But a whole group of modern players have left their regular course behind, and rediscovered the magic of the game in the process. These are the golf adventurers - players who are pushing the idea of golf beyond the traditional eighteen holes into something far more thrilling and exciting. Players like Andre Tolme, who decided to turn Mongolia into a par 11.880 course. Or Torsten Schilling, who spends his weekends teeing off from the side of the boat, aiming for various sites back on shore. Or the participants in tournaments such as Greenland's Mount Dundas, where competitors have to scale a 75ft sheer cliff face, just to get to the first tee. From Death Valley to New Zealand's naked open, Duncan Lennard brings together these stories from the very edge of sport - remarkable golfers who have helped put the swing back into the game, tales to remind us why we fell in love with golf in the first place.

Gitca Golf Kelley Peter, 2021-03-01 Most golfers have been set up to fail. Trying to follow protocols that statistically stack the odds against them has led to an enormous amount of frustration and angst for most of the recreational golfers out there. Poor scores and extremely slow play have caused many golfers to lose much of their passion for golf. GITCA golf has streamlined the parameters for recreational play to allow for better scoring opportunities and much more expedient play. By adapting our guidelines and maintaining an eternally grateful mindset, everyone who tees it up will be inspired to play golf much more often with those closest to them.

Golf Against Cancer Trevor Sandford, 2012-05-03 You'd have to be mad to play golf every day for a month alongside the busiest motorway in Britain but that's what Trevor Sandford did in August 2011. When an ordinary club golfer took on the challenge for charity, every day brought on a new adventure. This book tells the tale of the Golf Against Cancer tour with all the blisters, the blog and the banter. Some of these stories you could not make up; this is genuine feel-good non-fiction. A brilliant and funny account of a fantastic achievement The Social Golfer

Golf Michael V. Uschan, 2014-04-14 This diagram-loaded volume explains the history of the game of golf before delving into the science of the sport. The book explores how physics, biomechanics, psychology, and technology all play a part in how a person plays the sport. Author Michael V. Uschan concludes with training and conditioning techniques that can be used by golfers.
