Lake Francis Case, a Missouri River Reservoir Charles H. Walburg,1977 Studies conducted during the first 23 years of impoundment of Lake Francis Case indicated that fish abundance in the early 1970's was about half of that in the late 1950's. Of 39 species collected, 12 were abundant in the 1950's and 8 in the 1970's, but only 4 were abundant throughout the impoundment period.

Changes in the Fish Population in Lake Francis Case in South Dakota in the First 16 Years of Impoundment Charles R. Gasaway,1970 The total number of adult fish in Lake Frances Case, a main steam Missouri River Reservoir, has declined since impoundment in 1952. Goldeye, channel catfish, and northern redhorse have probably remained the same; emerald shiner, white bass, walleye, and possibly flathead catfish have increased. The sauger population began to decline at about the time walleye numbers increased. Some species formerly present have become rare. Forage species in the reservoir were gizzard shad, emerald shiner, and yellow perch, but these were not present in large enough numbers to provide an abundant forage fish population.

Field & Stream , FIELD & STREAM, America's largest outdoor sports magazine, celebrates the outdoor experience with great stories, compelling photography, and sound advice while honoring the traditions hunters and fishermen have passed down for generations.

Review of Fishery Studies on Missouri River Main Stem Reservoirs Norman Gustaf Benson, 1968

The six main stem Missouri River reservoirs are described, and information available through 1964 on plankton, water chemistry, fish populations, and water management is discussed. At maximum pool, these reservoirs have a capacity of 76 million acre-feet and a surface area of 1.2 million acres. Each of the upper reservoirs is larger in capacity and area than the sum of the lower three reservoirs. Fishes common in this system are bigmouth buffalo, carp, river carpsucker, yellow perch, goldeye, northern pike, sauger, walleye, white crappie, black crappie, and freshwater drum. Available information on growth rates, year-class strength, and relative abundance of common species is described. Limiting factors of the environments are the turbidities, wind, and fine soils. Research needs and problems relative to fish production are discussed.

Effects of Post-impoundment Shore Modifications on Fish Populations in Missouri River Reservoirs

Norman Gustaf Benson, 1980 In the Missouri River main stem reservoirs in Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota, hydrodynamic processes have decreased the lengths of shorelines and changed their configurations during the first 20 to 25 years of impoundment. Physical changes to the shore probably influenced fish abundance and species composition by changing the quality and quantity of spawning and nursery habitat.
