Vide in Newton's Nemesis is a graphic novel designed to help children learn about fractions and fraction division. The engaging math mystery features diverse, relatable children who struggle with fractions, and yet, they must solve a problem posed by a mysterious old woman, Ms. I. D. Vide. Our story begins when Theo gets a new job watching a small puppy named Newton, who unfortunately lives next door to a creepy old house at the end of Pentagon Court. Before long, Theo and his friends discover the crazy old woman who lives there needs a dog bone for a spell, and the race to save Newton begins. Written by a former teacher and professor of mathematics education, the story's underlying narrative reassures students that making mistakes is a normal part of learning. Mistakes do not mean you are bad at math. When you solve a hard problem, it can feel great! As one character in the story explains, trying difficult problems are just like playing against great teams in sports, If you are playing an easy team, winning is boring. If you play a hard team and win, that's fun! The captivating images in the graphic novel are ideal for struggling readers and students learning to speak English, providing ample opportunities to differentiate classroom instruction and generate rich discussions. Activities are embedded in the book and free lessons are available at www.MathComicHero.com to help teachers launch explorations of the different meanings of fractions and division. Topics include measurement and equal sharing models of division, linear and circle models of fractions, division with unit fractions, and using the common denominator method to solve fractions division.

The US Sports Film: A Genre of American Dream Time Danny Gronmaier,2022-12-05 Sports and film are media that create time. They are temporal not only in the sense that they are defined and regulated by certain temporalities as a result of processes of social negotiation, but also in the sense of modulating and intervening in these processes in the first place. They are determined by multiple temporalities referring to and aligning along perceptual corporeality; but at the same time, they also produce time through and along temporalities of bodily expression and perception. Thus, as much as we perceive and understand sports and film by means of our culturally coded conceptions of time, this comprehension is itself already the product of these media's fabrication and modulation of certain audiovisual imaginations of time. This book examines these imaginations with regard to US team sports feature films, understanding the former as the latter's constitutive conflict which makes these films graspable as a genre in the first place. By addressing temporality as an ever-new crystallization of a heroic past and an unattainable future in a saturated yet volatile present, this conflict connects substantially to the American Dream as an idea of community-building historicity. Departing from a non-taxonomic approach in genre theory and such philosophical recognition of the American Dream as less an ideological narrative but more a social and socially effective imaginary embedded in an audiovisual discourse of time, this book demonstrates the interrelation of sports, cinema and "American" subjectivization along close readings of the poetics of affect of five exemplary sports films (FIELD OF DREAMS, WE ARE MARSHALL, KNUTE ROCKNE ALL AMERICAN, JIM THORPE - ALL-AMERICAN, MIRACLE).
