On the Other Side of the Blackboard Patricia Lukoschek,2013-07-16 Just a few months after losing my teaching contract, I started to write down all the changes that I was facing. In all honesty, I was a creature of habit. I always had everything ready for work the following day. From my lesson plans, clothes, lunch and supplies. My dear friends, Myrna Almas and Gonzalo Moraga were gracious enough to store all my precious teacher supplies until a job would come my way. I dont know what I would have done without Don Campbell, another great friend. He became my editor in chief, technology guru and dear friend throughout this adventure. I must say that my first few months were difficult and unfamiliar. I truly did not think that I would be able to make it, either financially or emotionally. With a mortgage, car payment, and insurance to worry about, I began my adventures in substitute teaching. It has turned out to be both a blessing and a learning experience. An experience that took me out of my box and into the lives of children, parents, administrators and teachers that I would have never met otherwise. Most importantly, I learned that I can still touch a childs life even if I am on the other side of the blackboard.
