Holding Power Peter J. Turpel, 2011-05 If Alexander Graham Bell could see today's communications marvels, says Peter J. Turpel, he'd want to know one thing: Is the technology bringing us closer together, or is it separating us? As president of Phone On-Hold Marketing Systems, Turpel has emphasized the human touch since founding the company in 1984. The telephone, even in this age of digital diversity, is the ultimate communication tool - but one that businesses often fail to appreciate. With an on-hold network, they have an indispensable opportunity to build relationships, loyalty, and the bottom line. A company's marketing efforts - all those ads, promotions, mailings - focus on getting that phone to ring. And once it rings, your company must cultivate the caller. On-hold time is inevitable, but it's not being on hold that people dislike. They dislike being ignored. They want respect for their time. They're annoyed by an insincere we're sorry you're on hold, we appreciate your business, followed by inane music or silence. There's a better way. A professional on-hold presentation is productive and entertaining - and skillfully builds the brand so essential to sales. Callers on hold appreciate useful and engaging information. They want to do business with a company that shows it cares about them. This is an opportunity to build relationships to keep them coming back. It's the perfect time to tell callers what's unique about your company - what sets you apart and what special promotions you're offering. You can engage and intrigue them rather than frustrate them. Turpel knows what works! And he knows busy executives don't have time for do-it-yourself systems that fail to deliver. They are learning that the technicians who design the phone systems are not the ones with the marketing savvy to use them to best advantage. They are learning that professional studio productions pay dividends in building customer relations. Peter J. Turpel can show you how an on-hold system can help you stand apart from your competition for a huge return on investment. It's not being on hold that people dislike. They dislike being ignored!

1501 Ways to Reward Employees Bob Nelson, 2012-01-01 Suggests ways of motivating employees by recognizing their accomplishments, including both formal and informal rewards; individual and group rewards; and special events, incentives, and contests.

1001 Ways to Reward Employees Bob Nelson, 2005-06-13 Why is 1001 Ways to Reward Employees, with over 1.4 million copies in print, such an extraordinary bestseller? Because a little over ten years ago Bob Nelson took the seeds of an idea and turned it into something indispensable for business. The idea? That it's not a raise that motivates an employee, and it's not a promotion--what really sparks a person to perform are those intangible, unexpected gestures that signify real appreciation for a job well done. Now, after having worked with thousands of organizations in the years since 1001 Ways to Reward. . . was first published, Bob Nelson presents a second edition packed with hundreds of new ideas and examples of how companies are using rewards and recognitions to boost productivity and keep their valued employees happy. Airplane mechanics are rewarded with balloons and pinwheels. Another manager calls his employees' mothers and thanks them for raising such industrious children. There are ideas from the offbeat (The Margarita Award) to the company-wide (a quiet room) to the embarrassingly simple (a hand-written thank you note) to the wacky (the Laugh-a-Day challenge) to the formal (a two-week promotion to special assistant to the president). Each section includes no-cost rewards and low-cost rewards, both public and private, making this new edition an indispensable resource for making the person/achievement/reward equation work.
