Splicing Modern Ropes Jan-Willem Polman,2016-05-05 The time when every vessel going to sea made use of 3-strand rope has gone. Splicing that type of rope and cord is relatively straightforward. Nowadays the most common type of rope used on board yachts, dinghies, motorboats, working boats and ferries is braided rope. Few people have the knowledge to splice it, or even where to start. Splicing Modern Ropes is the first guide to this essential skill. It explains why splices are better – and stronger – than knots or shackles for joining or shortening rope, and how to go about it. With this skill, yachtsmen can customise their ropes, optimise their deck layout, taper their sheets for ease of handling, and splice an extra cover on their ropes to give better grip, avoid chafe and make them last longer. Using clear, step-by-step photography and detailed instructions, this book will guide readers through all the stages required to make strong, reliable splices.

Maintaining a Fiber Optic Fusion Splicer Edward J Forrest Jr,2015-03-13 There are many facets to a fiber optic design and installation. One of them is precision cleaning the connector end face. Another is precision cleaning prior to the fusion splice operation. It once was where the fusion splicer was a monstrous device and the procedure of joining two bare fibers (barely the size of a human hair) was somewhere between magic and craft and efficacy of the instrument. In these times, much as end face cleaning, fusion splicing reality exceeds what was once thought theoretical only a few years ago. In these times there are various units some with like features and other unique features such as having explosion proof capacity or mini-sizes that can be used even in an inverted position. There are v-groove, core and cladding alignment machines as well as those that can 'plasma weld' multiple ribbon fibers. Precision cleaning the slicer components as well as proper preparation of the 'bare glass' contribute in concert to a low-loss, first-time fusion splice. This brief tutorial discusses the differences between precision cleaning and cosmetic cleaning and how one can cross-contaminate to the other. Also noted is a discussion of precision cleaning solvents and wiping materials. As with precision cleaning the fiber optic end face, proper preparation of the fiber and maintenance of the fusion splicer itself are critical considerations to future proof fiber optic designs and installations.

Optical Fiber Fusion Splicing Andrew D. Yablon,2005-12-17 This book is an up-to-date treatment of optical fiber fusion splicing incorporating all the recent innovations in the field. It provides a toolbox of general strategies and specific techniques that the reader can apply when optimizing fusion splices between novel fibers. It specifically addresses considerations important for fusion splicing of contemporary specialty fibers including dispersion compensating fiber, erbium-doped gain fiber, polarization maintaining fiber, and microstructured fiber. Finally, it discusses the future of optical fiber fusion splicing including silica and non-silica based optical fibers as well as the trend toward increasing automation. Whilst serving as a self-contained reference work, abundant citations from the technical literature will enable readers to readily locate primary sources.
