Emerging Competition in Postal and Delivery Services Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2013-03-09
Emerging Competition in Postal and Delivery Services brings together practitioners, postal administrators, the courier industry, regulators, academic economists and lawyers to examine important policy and regulatory issues facing the postal and delivery industries. This volume reviews such topics as cost and productivity analysis, universal service and entry, demand analysis and the structure of postal payment system, price regulation and competition.

Postal and Delivery Services Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2013-12-01
When Postmaster General Creswell penned his concern about the impact of electronic diversion on his postal organization, the year was 1872. General Creswell, it turned out, fretted unnecessarily. Facsimile did not achieve commercial viability until roughly a century after his tenure as Postmaster General and today that technology is fading rapidly from the communication scene. Moreover, it never appears to have significantly affected physical letter volumes. However, if General Creswell were leading a major postal organization today, he likely would feel threatened by the potential of Internet communication to cause electronic diversion of physical mail. Should recent technology developments cause the oft-predicted (but so far incorrect) inflection point that would mark the beginning of declining mail volumes. the implications from a management standpoint will be profound. The relatively fixed nature of postal costs suggest that volume declines must be offset though improved productivity, reduced cost of inputs, revenue from new products that share common costs, or reduced level of universal service.

Postal and Delivery Innovation in the Digital Economy Michael A. Crew, Timothy J. Brennan, 2014-12-12 Worldwide, postal and delivery economics is the subject of considerable interest. The postal industry's business model is in drastic need of change. Notably, the European Commission and member states are still wrestling with the problems of implementing liberalization of entry into postal markets, addressing digital competition, and maintaining the universal service obligation. In the United States, the Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act of 2006 has, perhaps, exacerbated some of the problems faced by the United States Postal Service (USPS). Currently, the USPS has serious financial problems because of difficulties it faces in making changes and the failure of the Act to address problems that have been long-standing. Electronic competition is severe and affects post offices (POs) worldwide, which have been slow to address the threat. This book addresses this new reality and includes discussion of how POs may attempt to reinvent themselves. Parcels and packets will play a major role in developing new business models for postal operators. This book is of use not only to students and researchers interested in the field, but also to postal operators, consulting firms, utilities, regulatory commissions, Federal Government Departments and agencies of the European Union and other countries.

Commercialization of Postal and Delivery Services: National and International Perspectives Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2012-12-06
xiii • We have almost the cheapest letter price in the OECD. • We've quadrupled the retail outlets where you can buy stamps, but closed three quarters of our Post Offices. On time delivery is better than 97%. • The workforce has been reduced by 40%, with a 25% increase in volumes over the period. Real unit costs, measured by total real expenditure divided by total volumes, have been reduced by over 20%. What do these results and achievements mean for policy setters around the world? In particular, do these results for New Zealand Post prove that it is a commercial business, and what are the lessons for other postal businesses? Market Forces New Zealand Post presently has a limited letter monopoly, a 45 cent letter price against an 80 cent competitive floor price. The existence of this level of protection somehow negates the company's commercial achievements. The combination of high efficiency and low prices cannot persuade everyone that the results are not my view, are the only ones that can solely monopoly driven. Market forces, in answer my question: is New Zealand Post a commercial organization? We need the test of free and open competition to see whether we've got the business formula right. Before advancing this argument, which in essence is the case for deregulation, it may be useful to distinguish between market behavior and Post behavior.

Models for Delivery and Price Equilibrium and Statistical Quality Control in Supply Chains Min Cao,2017-01-27 This dissertation, Models for Delivery and Price Equilibrium and Statistical Quality Control in Supply Chains by Min, Cao, 曹, was obtained from The University of Hong Kong (Pokfulam, Hong Kong) and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons: Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License. Abstract: Abstract of thesis titled Models for delivery and price equilibrium and statistical quality control in supply chains submitted by Cao Min for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Hong Kong in April 2007 High-quality manufacturing, global logistics, time competition, and highly volatile demand are common characteristics of modern businesses. Thus being the case, in this dissertation we first study the nature of delivery and price competition in a buyer-supplier supply chain network, and then study statistical quality control which can be applied to many stages in a supply chain. This dissertation consists of two parts. In Part I, we present equilibrium models for delivery and price competition under the assumption of cooperative JIT purchasing and small-lot delivery, in which the buyers request products in small-lot frequent deliveries, while the suppliers compete for order shares by supplying products to the buyers at attractive prices and with good delivery arrangements. The equilibrium conditions are derived using a finite variational inequality in which decentralized decisions are made simultaneously by the participants. We also consider two scenarios about the transportation of products, in which Model 1 assumes that the buyers are responsible for transportation of the products purchased, and Model 2 assumes that the suppliers are responsible for delivering the products to the buyers. We investigate how cost affects delivery and price competition, and how delivery competition changes demand allocation. Most policies available in the literature aim at maximizing expected profit. In uncertain environments, however, the actual profit attained may deviate from the maximum expected profit when the probabilities of unfavorable outcomes such as lost sales or excess storage are large. In order to enhance the profitability of buyers who face volatile demand, an information entropy approach is used to minimize the increase in information entropy in Model 3. Numerical examples are given to illustrate these models. In Part II, we develop and study a new statistical distribution called negative binomial group distribution (NBGD), which is derived from a group by group inspection procedure called negative binomial group inspection (NBGI). Based on the NBGI, we propose a new control chart called the cumulative group count control chart (CGCC chart) and a new sequential acceptance sampling plan. Numerical examples are given to show how the CGCC chart and the NBGD acceptance sampling plan work as tools in statistical quality control. The proposed CGCC chart and the NBGD acceptance sampling plan provide examples for the construction of two-dimensional control charts and acceptance sampling plans.
